

Louis Cooper . . . Critic Of City Arrested

By CHARLIE HARPSTER
Star Staff Writer

Louis Patrick Cooper, of 321 So. 18th, coordinator of human rights for the Lincoln Action Program, was arrested at his home Friday night on a felony warrant in connection with the alleged sale of narcotics, Lincoln Police Inspector Robert Sawdon said.

Sawdon said six narcotics officers of the Lincoln Police Dept. and two officers of the Nebraska State Patrol participated in the raid after a month-long investigation.

Cooper allegedly sold a quantity of LSD to an undercover agent on Tuesday, Jan. 18, according to police.

Signed After 5 p.m.
Deputy Lancaster County Attorney Robert Gibson told The Star that Judge Ralph Slocum signed the warrant shortly after 5 p.m. Friday.

In a press conference earlier Friday, Cooper had said he recently talked with Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee's civil rights subcommittee and was promised a federal investigation into Lincoln's civil rights controversy. (See Story on Page 7.)

Two men were arrested with Cooper and booked on charges of being present where an illicit narcotic was being used, Sawdon said. He said one of the men, 24, gave a Lincoln address and the other, 21, gave a Crete address.

They were not named in the arrest warrant for alleged narcotic sale, Sawdon said.

Arraignment Monday
Cooper is expected to be arraigned on the charge Monday at 11 a.m. in Lancaster County District Court, Sawdon said.

According to Sawdon, narcotics officers also were "equipped with a search warrant for 321 So. 18th to search for illicit drugs and controlled substances."

Police reported, "Additional drugs and drug-related paraphernalia were seized in the house which may result in the filing of other charges."

2 Men Killed In Separate Accidents

By United Press International

The Nebraska State Patrol identified the victims as Arthur Tignor, 45, Sulfur Springs, Texas, and Daniel Grant, 55, of Macy.

The patrol said Tignor was killed when the southbound semi-trailer truck he was driving swerved into a ditch off Nebraska 281 nearly five miles north of Red Cloud.

The patrol said the truck then slammed into a farm yard, caught fire and burned.

Grant was killed in a two-car crash just southwest of Walthill on a Thurston County road. The patrol said the northbound car driven by Grant collided head-on with an oncoming car driven by Lawrence Fahrenholz, 54, Walthill.

The patrol said Fahrenholz, and his son, Rick, 13, a passenger in the car, suffered minor injuries, with young Fahrenholz taken to Pender Hospital for treatment.

Neighbor Files Suit Requesting Restraint Of Cat

Louisville, Ky. (UPI) — Alvin Voit has filed suit against his neighbor, Albert Leake, asking a court to declare Leake's cat Willard a common nuisance and to force Leake to restrain him.

Voit says Willard sleeps on top of his expensive Mercedes-Benz and tears up the soft roof with his claws.

DEMOS SAY NIXON NEGLECTFUL

—Youth-in-Action Portuguese Is Required In Learning Experience

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

One Lincoln student with her work cut out for her during the next few weeks is a girl on her way to a year as a student in a new culture . . . and within a new language.

She is 16-year-old Sheila Shanks, who will be on her way to Brazil later this month to participate in the year-long "Americans abroad" program of the American Field Service (AFS).

And Sheila, who says she's already started to study Portuguese "a bit," will have a full-blown necessity for a knowledge of that language before long — when she begins her studies in a Portuguese-language school in the Brazilian state of Bahia.

Cram Course Planned
Before then, however, she's will have had a week-long "cram" course in the language during a stopover in Rio de Janeiro, and then a month of practice with her host family in the coastal city of Salvador.

"The adjustment to different people, to the culture and learning the language" will be her three biggest goals immediately, Sheila said this week as she prepared for her Jan. 31 departure to New York.

"Everything will be entirely new," she noted, including the weather — it's virtually summer all year long where she's headed.

In fact, she noted, there'll be a month left in her new friends' summer vacation when Sheila arrives in February.

Word that she had been chosen for the trip abroad came early this month, and the message capped activities that had started with applications and interviews early in the fall.

Others Named
While Sheila, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hughes Shanks of 2761 Randolph, is winging her way to Latin America, two other Lincoln lasses are on their way to the "land down under" as a part of AFS programs.

They are Southeast High student Nancy Fahlberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fahlberg, and East High student Pam Davidson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Davidson.

Nancy will spend a year in New Zealand; Pam in Australia.

"I know there will be a difference," said Sheila of her outlook on the trip. Still, she noted, "People are basically the same" everywhere.

"You have to be able to accept that," she said.

Local Retail Dairy Products Dated By Variety Of Methods

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

In a survey of several local dairies by The Star it was learned that the dairy industry has not been unaffected by the open-dating issue.

A variety of methods — from open-dating (Roberts and Fairmont) to no dating at all (Goodrich) — are being employed by the dairies. Beatrice Foods (Meadowgold), which uses six imprinted numbers on the top of their milk cartons, declined to reveal their code system.

In addition to milk, the freshness dating of cottage cheese was also surveyed.

Roberts Dairy branch manager Larry Liebers reported that his company uses a system of open-dating on milk. He explained that the date printed in black ink at the top of a milk carton is a "pull date" or the last day the milk will remain on the shelf for sale. This code is based on a nine-day shelf life for milk in the store.

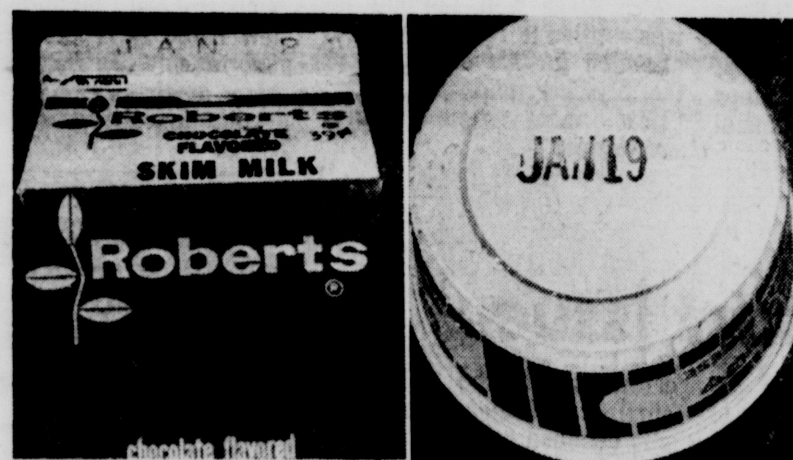

Easier To Control

Liebers added that open-dating makes it easier to control rotation in a store to "assure that the consumer gets the freshest product." He said that Roberts salesmen check the stores daily to rotate the milk and to remove any cartons that are pull-dated for that day.

There is no reason for milk to go bad, said Liebers, except for temperature. He suggested that housewives should keep a constant check on the temperature control in their refrigerators. Every degree of temperature below 45 degrees for milk storage is equivalent to four days of shelf life, said another Roberts spokesman.

Liebers reported that cottage cheese runs on a 14-day code. The numbers printed on the bottom of the carton indicate the day of the month the product should be pulled from the shelf, as well as which of the four vats the product was made in. For example, 253 would mean that the product would be removed from the market on the 25th of that month and that it was prepared in vat "three." He added that the vat number is important in a cultured product in case the item should need to be recalled for any reason.

Changed Recently
Also using open-dating is Fairmont Food Co. Ed Cotner, state merchandising manager for Fairmont, said that his company recently changed to this system "in the interest of the consumer."

STAR PHOTOS

When asked what the length of the code was for milk and cottage cheese, Cotner indicated that this information was "confidential." He did say that in the summer months the products are not pre-coded as far ahead as in the colder seasons.

Cotner suggested that the shelf life for both milk and cottage cheese was eight to 12 days from production, when kept between 32 and 40 degrees. He estimated that both products would still be good four to five days after the pull-date.

He also said that Fairmont routeman making full-service deliveries to stores are responsible for rotating the merchandise and moving the older items forward.

No Code System
At the other end of the spectrum, Goodrich Dairy uses no system of code-dating for milk.

Paul Wagner, sales manager for Goodrich in Omaha, said that codes were "simply not necessary" in Goodrich's case. He explained that daily deliveries were made to most stores and that the turnover was so great that "most milk products are not in the stores more than two days."

Goodrich, unlike most dairies, operates its own retail outlets. For this reason, said Wagner, the company "never loses control of the product." It is a matter of supervision, he added, "from production to final sale."

For cottage cheese Wagner explained that a 10-letter word — "brickhouse" — was used to code pull-dates on the bottom of the containers. Each letter of the word stands for a number from one to 10, so that a code of "br" would indicate that the product should be removed from the shelves on the 12th of the month. Wagner added that cottage cheese runs on a five-day code.

"Not For Consumer"
Taking another point of view, John Spray, district manager of Beatrice Foods Co., producer of Meadowgold products, said that "code-dating is not for the consumer."

Spray said that he did not feel the consumer should be "burdened" with such information, indicating that the codes are for the "men who service the accounts and for the health dept. and the state who check the product."

He went on to say that his company does not make an effort to educate the consumer on its code, but that it will "guarantee" its product at all times, and that the consumer can buy Meadowgold products "with confidence."

Spray remarked that he does not believe in open-dating. He added that freshness depends more on the control of the product at the plant, good truck refrigeration and correct handling of the product on display.

Mac McCubbin, chief of the bureau of dairies and foods — a division of the Department of Agriculture — says he is also against open-dating.

He added that open-dating would cause dairies to dispose of great quantities of milk that were still fresh and palatable. In the end, he continued, the consumer would have to pay more for his milk.

In McCubbin's opinion, "code-dating does not take into account how the product is handled."

He went on to say that the dairy industry is the "most regulated and standardized industry we have."

McCubbin indicated that there is a state Grade A milk law which requires that milk be kept at a temperature of 45 degrees or lower. He added that there are no statutory requirements concerning freshness dating on milk products.

Leaders Promise Program Actions

. . . TV FORMAT SAID EFFECTIVE

©The New York Times

Washington — Democrats in Congress presented their own State of the Union message Friday by using a nationwide television program to accuse President Nixon of neglecting problems at home and prolonging the war in Indochina.

Against the criticism was a promise by the House Democratic leaders that the Democratic-controlled Congress would enact in some form such major administration proposals as welfare reform, revenue-sharing and water pollution.

But responding to Nixon's plea in his State of the Union message for Congress to set aside partisanship in an election year, Speaker Carl Albert emphasized that "cooperation is a two-way street."

"We are going to cooperate with the President on everything that is in the national interest," said Albert, summing up the Democratic TV show. "We simultaneously call upon the President to stop vetoing bills that are in the national interest."

To many Democrats, the form of their rebuttal to the Nixon message was as significant as the words, for after years of experimenting, Democrats in Congress believed they had finally hit upon an effective television format for answering Nixon.

Talk-Panel Combination

The format was a combination of a TV talk show and panel discussion as a group of nine Democratic representatives took turns criticizing the administration and answering questions phoned in from across the nation or raised in the studio audience.

As a novel feature in a program entitled "Your Voice Counts," the Democrats gave listeners a chance to make toll-free calls over a special leased telephone circuit midway through the program. The circuit was swamped with calls from throughout the nation.

In years past, congressional Democrats have relied largely upon party leaders and elders to present their rebuttal to the president's State of the Union message. This year they deliberately turned to new or younger faces in the party.

The panel was composed of Sens. Thomas F. Eagleton of Missouri, William Proxmire of Wisconsin, Frank Church of Idaho, Lloyd M. Bentson of Texas, and Reps. John Brademas of Michigan, Ralph H. Metcalfe of Illinois,

'Hughes Biographer' Leans To Hoax Theory

©The New York Times

New York — The attorney for Clifford Irving, the novelist who claims to have compiled an autobiography of Howard R. Hughes, said Friday that he and his client were "leaning" to a theory that the novelist had been a victim of a hoax by a "gang of six to eight people."

Attorney Martin S. Ackerman said such a hoax would have had to involve an actor who impersonated Hughes and "two master forgers" able to duplicate the handwriting of the billionaire.

Several hours later after Irving flew to Spain Ackerman denied that he really favored this theory and said that instead he leaned to what he called "the loyal servant" theory. Under this theory, a mysterious Swiss bank account into which went money intended for Hughes would have been opened by a Hughes employee instead of an impostor.

'Answers' Filed

Meanwhile, attorneys for the Hughes interests filed in State Supreme Court here a two-page, typewritten questionnaire bearing what purported to be Hughes' handwritten answers describing "forgeries" the autobiographical materials to have been published by McGraw-Hill.

Friday night Irving left the country, departing from Kennedy Airport at 7 p.m., for what his lawyer described as "a weekend with his family" on an island off the coast of Spain. Ackerman said Irving was expected back on Monday and that the trip had been planned for several days.

Life magazine issued a statement strongly opposing his departure.

In other developments, Hughes lawyers gave the court the transcript of a letter, reputed to be from the Swiss Credit Bank, saying that Hughes never cashed or deposited checks from McGraw-Hill. And Zurich banking sources said a woman, and not Hughes, had opened the account in that bank

John Melcher of Montana and Lenora K. Sullivan of Missouri.

Leaders Sum Up

Notably missing were the committee chairmen and the presidential candidates, although in keeping with past practice, the job of summing up the program was given to the two House leaders, Speaker Albert and Rep. Hale Boggs of Louisiana.

Serving as an anchor man and moderator, Eagleton led off the informally cast program with the observation that Nixon has presented "a domestic grabbag" in his address.

"No one could possibly disagree with the broad, humane generalities in his speech . . ." he said. "The problem is not where we are going, but how we're going to get there."

With that as a preface, the panelists, each assigned a particular subject, made the following observations in brief statements followed by questions:

Brademas — There is a large gap between the promises and performances of the administration on education. "On the record, not of words but of deeds, no administration of this generation has been so hostile to education as has that of Richard Nixon."

Mrs. Griffiths — The President's health insurance proposals are inadequate and the administration has failed to give active support to the equal rights amendment for women pending in Congress.

Proxmire — Unemployment remains the No. 1 domestic problem: "What does the President propose to do about it? Nothing."

Mrs. Sullivan — In every area of consumer protection, the administration has been "timid and indecisive."

Church — Nixon, upon his election, could have withdrawn the bulk of the ground forces in nine months, but instead the withdrawal is being "dragged out over four agonizing years" and the "end of the war is still not in sight."

Metcalfe — The administration has not responded to the needs of cities and minority groups and has "clearly misplaced priorities" by now proposing a $5.5 billion space shuttle.

Bentson — Nixon in 1963 made "huge promises," suggesting that "the crime problem would be solved if only he became president" but crime rates continue to rise and "the empty promise of the past have become the failures of the present."

that bore the name "H. R. Hughes."

Three checks totaling $650,000 were assertedly paid to Hughes in payment for material given to Irving and found their way into the account.

Ackerman said he and Irving "have developed three theories" about the controversy.

'Loyal Servant'

The first theory he described as the "loyal servant theory" in which an employee of Hughes opened the account in the Swiss bank. The second theory, he said, concerned an "imposter." The third, he went on, would have Irving as the imposter.

"We've rejected the last theory and lean toward the second," he said. Ackerman said, "You'd have to have a gang of six to eight people involved, including two master forgers and an actor 6 feet 3 inches tall who weighed 120 pounds."

"Then you'd have to have someone who bankrolled it and someone who did the research," he went on. "Someone paid for the travel. A gang that clever would not be doing it for just a couple of hundred thousand dollars."

Ackerman said that, under his theory, two master forgers would have been necessary because "one man 6 foot 3 inches tall wrote two letters in front of Cliff — the other forger would be the one to sign the name to the letter."

Later, Ackerman said that his words had been meant ironically and that the details he outlined of such an "imposter" theory were so "preposterous" that he assumed the irony would be grasped.

Rejecting his earlier statement, he said he and Irving actually believed the first theory to be the most viable.

'Hughes' A German Blonde

Zurich — Swiss banking sources disclosed

that "H. R. Hughes," who opened the numbered Swiss bank account into which $650,000 was paid for the rights to Howard Hughes's autobiography, was a German-speaking blonde woman in her early 30s using a forged passport. The money, of course, has been withdrawn.

71 Accused Of Car Thefts

New York — A federal indictment charged 71 persons with involvement in a ring that allegedly stole and sold more than 4,500 luxury cars in the last three years. Fifty-eight of the suspects were rounded up by FBI agents in various parts of the country. The car-to-order ring allegedly operated out of a store in Brooklyn.

Democrats Answer Nixon

TV Station Transfer Set

Washington — The Federal Communications Commission set March 19 as the date for the transfer of television Channel 5 in Boston from the Boston Herald-Traveler Corp. to Boston Broadcasters, Inc. But the Herald-Traveler indicated that it would move to block the action, the latest in a 15-year dispute.

Bill Sought To Force Dock Strike End

Key Biscayne, Fla. (AP) — President Nixon sent emergency legislation to Congress on Friday to force striking West Coast longshoremen back to work immediately while a federal panel settles the long-festering dock dispute through binding arbitration.

Nixon asked Congress, which went into session Tuesday, to act within a week to end "the dimensions of destruction which this strike is wreaking upon its victims."

"Let there be no mistake about the urgency of this legislation," Nixon said in his message to Congress. "This is a vital matter to the people of

Action Demanded

The chief executive coupled the call for special legislation with a demand that Congress act this session on a broader measure he proposed two years ago to cope with crippling transportation strikes.

Twenty-four ports from the Canadian to the Mexican borders were paralyzed July 1 when 13,000 members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union walked off their jobs. Nixon invoked the Taft-Hartley Act in October and the dock workers returned to work, but they resumed their strike Monday — three weeks after the cooling-off injunction expired.

In his message to Congress, Nixon said the dispute has lingered "because a few have been insensitive to the harm they are inflicting upon the many who are not a party to it." He charged, too, that the American people "have been made hostage to those few who persist in prolonging this dispute."

He didn't name names, but presidential press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler made it clear that Nixon was referring to union leaders. Ziegler said Nixon and others in the administration believe the ILWU has shown "an unreasonable reluctance to proceed in a healthy spirit of negotiations."

Bridges Balky

ILWU President Harry Bridges said, "Any legislation proposed by the President will not settle the strike." Longshoremen leaders contended also that Nixon's proposal would set a precedent that organized labor could not accept.

But in San Francisco, the Pacific Maritime Association said through Secretary James Robertson that the shippers support any legislation aimed at resolving the strike.

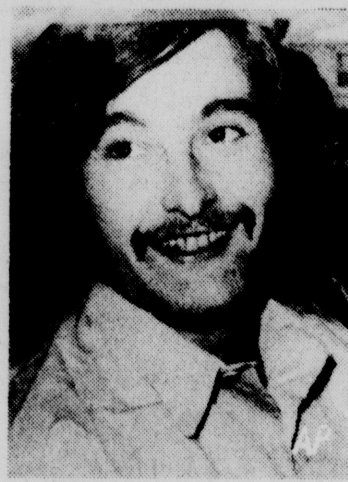

"It is still our preference, however, to negotiate a settlement across the bargaining table," Robertson said. Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz announced in Denver that he has invited farm leaders to an emergency meeting in Washington Wednesday to review the dock strike situation. Butz, in a speech to the American National Cattlemen's Association, said the tie-up is "a serious emergency for American farmers."

The legislation would work this way:

Immediately upon its becoming law, the strike would end. The secretary of labor would appoint a three-member arbitration board which would, within 40 days, prepare settlement terms. The board's settlement would be binding on both sides for at least 18 months, meaning there would be no strike or lockout during that time.

Funds Lacking

United Nations, N.Y. (AP) — Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said the United Nations will be $24 million short by the end of June unless steps are taken to meet the financial crisis.

Richard Charles LaPoint

Ex-Chutist Accused Of Air Piracy

Denver (UPI) — A former Army paratrooper and beach bum who bailed out of a commandeered Hughes Airwest DC9 with $50,000 ransom but was captured by FBI agents, was charged Friday with air piracy.

The Air Force, which sent two fighter-bombers to chase the airliner from Nevada to Colorado, said it would use its jets to stop future bailout hijackings.

Richard Charles LaPoint, 23, who sprained his left ankle and a wrist when he landed in a wheat field Thursday near Akron, Colo., was ordered jailed without bond by U.S. Magistrate Royce D. Sickler.

Conviction of the federal charge of air piracy carries a maximum sentence of death. Sickler set Jan. 26 for a preliminary hearing in Denver for LaPoint, who appeared in court in a wheelchair.

The judge told LaPoint he was entitled to receive medical attention for his injuries, but the hijacker told the judge: "How about some mental assistance?"

Last Months Of '71 See Less Inflation

The New York Times

Washington — The nation's economy in the final months of 1971 had more growth and less inflation than had been the case for several years, government reports disclosed Friday.

The highlights:

—Consumer prices rose in December, the first full month after the price-wage freeze, by 0.4%, a somewhat smaller post-freeze "bulge" than had been generally anticipated by the government. About half the increases was accounted for by items, such as fruits and vegetables, that were not and are not now under price control.

—The "real" gross national product rose in the fourth quarter of last year at an annual rate of 6.1%, after allowing for somewhat higher prices. This was better than in any quarter for the previous two years, except for the first quarter of 1971, which was swollen by the recovery from the late-1970 strike at General Motors.

—The rise in prices as measured by the gross national product — slowed dramatically in the fourth quarter, partly because of the freeze, to show the smallest rate of inflation since 1965.

Food prices, partly uncontrolled, rose 1.1% in December, or 0.7% after allowance for normal seasonal increases.

The best illustration of the effect of the end of the freeze was in the sector called non-food commodities, which rose

0.3% in December after showing no change for the three months of the freeze. A good example of a specific item was new cars, whose prices were allowed to rise by the Price Commission after the freeze.

The other sector, services, rose 0.3% in December, little changed from the preceding three months but substantially less than the customary monthly rise during the sustained period of inflation.

Elderly, Chronically Ill Are Hit Hardest By Flu

Atlanta (AP) — The National Center for Disease Control (CDC) says Hong Kong flu has claimed nearly a thousand lives this year, especially among the elderly and chronically ill.

In its report for the week ending Jan. 15, the center said Thursday 843 deaths were attributed to either influenza or pneumonia, 268 deaths higher than normal.

There were confirmed regional outbreaks of the flu in 15 states, isolated outbreaks in 14 states and respiratory illnesses not yet confirmed as the Hong Kong variety in 10 states, the report said.

The Hong Kong-type flu struck many areas of the United States in 1968-69, killing 27,900 persons. The CDC said most were elderly, the ones who suffer most from influenza.

The center said widespread outbreaks have been reported this month in Maine, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Nebraska, Delaware and Colorado.

Regional outbreaks have been reported in New York, Michigan, Wisconsin, Ohio, Minnesota, Kansas, Iowa, South Dakota, Maryland, North Carolina, Texas, Louisiana, Idaho, Montana and Oregon.

Isolated cases have been reported in Vermont, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Missouri, Georgia, Florida, South Carolina, Alabama, Tennessee, Oklahoma, Utah, Washington, Hawaii and California.

The states where outbreaks of respiratory illnesses, not confirmed as flu, have been reported are New Hampshire, Indiana, North Dakota, Virginia, West Virginia, Mississippi, Arkansas, Kentucky, Arizona, New Mexico and Puerto Rico.

The CDC bases its findings on weekly reports from 122 cities in the 50 states, New York City and the District of Columbia.

Draft Lottery To Be Feb. 2

Washington (UPI) — The Selective Service said Friday it will hold its annual lottery Feb. 2 so that young men celebrating their 19th birthday this year will quickly learn their chances of being drafted in 1973.

With draft calls continuing to decline, it is very possible that few of them actually will be inducted.

The previous three annual lotteries were held in the summer but this one was moved up to give young men born in 1953 maximum advance notice.

SPEAKING OUT:

Taft's Limited Amnesty Bill Raises Important Issue

By STEVEN LEVINE

Ohio Senator Robert Taft has introduced a bill that, if enacted, would grant limited amnesty to American draft evaders. Limited amnesty in this instance would mean that the approximately 70,000 young men in foreign exile and the 500 young men now in jail could go home if they promised to do three years in the military or alternative service.

The chances of the bill passing both houses of Congress are slim; those of its escaping a presidential veto, virtually nonexistent.

But Taft does raise an issue that, with most of the public more or less duped into believing the Indochina war is ending, will shortly be extremely current. And simultaneously, he proposes what will, eventually, be the likely course of national policy on that issue.

When the war nominally ends, guilt, blame and responsibility will be coming from every corner. Indemnities will be retired. Forgiveness will be granted. Penalties will be assessed. Somewhere in the midst of all that, the question of those young men, and of the thousands of military deserters and political prisoners who swell their ranks, will arise.

Initial Studies

Initial studies show the American public to be inclined toward its own peculiar brand of generosity.

A recent poll, for instance, shows that about 70% of those sampled favored some sort of amnesty for draft evaders and resisters (only about 30% supported such magnanimity for deserters). However, all but about 30% again felt that some compensatory servitude should be obligatory.

The press remains largely cool to the whole idea at present, but it could warm up, despite the surprisingly unenlightened views recently expressed by one of my junior colleagues.

Certainly, any such move is going to enjoy automatic support from liberal legislators, some of whom, like George McGovern, have already gone on record as being pro-amnesty.

Compromises being effected as they are, some sort of amnesty-with-servitude is probably no more than three years away. It will probably be a general amnesty, affecting Americans sentenced for war crimes as well, all in a spirit more of forgetfulness than forgiveness. The Vietnam War was not pronounced ex cathedra; it has been a doctrine in question. It's hard for even the average worshiper of state power to get very self-righteous about it.

Thus shall the debts be retired. It will be decided that the best place to drop the blame is on history, and let's not talk about it any more, okay?

It would be neat enough if everything could be conjured away in this manner.

Response to Taft Bill

One notes with interest the response to the Taft bill of various organizations that involve draft resistance and/or evasion. So far, they have utterly rejected it as punitive, insulting and utterly irrelevant.

It would appear that the individuals in question do not view themselves as being in a mendicant posture before the great white father in Washington. They apparently do not cast themselves as traitors and cowards seeking to regain the lost respect of a firm but fair democratic nation.

In the main, those who left see themselves as moral refugees from a tyranny.

Ironically, to much of America, this will seem monumental hubris. It is ironic because the hubris is on the other side.

Those who condemn the conduct of Americans who, for any reason and by any means, avoided direct participation in the Indochina adventure, might have their attention directed to the conduct of those who did not.

On Other Shoulders

Upon the contemplation of napalm, of fragmentation grenades and flechettes, of defoliants, of 14,000-pound bombs, of tiger cages, of one-man presidential races, of heroin smuggling in military aircraft, of heroin use by military personnel, of the rapine, the torture, the murder that have all been the basic stuff of this nation's presence in Southeast Asia, the real hubris comes to lie upon other shoulders. It is indeed strange that those guiltiest of complicity in a vast and horrible crime should be idly contemplating clemency for those who declined roles in the conspiracy. One pictures liberal Nazis in 1938 chatting over schnapps about possibly allowing that misguided Albert Einstein to return home after the situation stabilizes, if he promises to be a good German, of course.

History, as those liberal Nazis found out, sometimes defines criminality in surprising ways. It must have seemed a long way from the Reichstag to Nuernberg.

If it is amnesty that is under consideration, then, let there be a real judging of where the malfeasance was committed; whether by a government that broke the law or a minority that obeyed it; and after that judgment is made, maybe instead of backhandedly offering a conditional indulgence for that minority, the mass who went along ought to politely ask them to come back and please to tell everybody how they managed not to make the same mistake as their neighbors.

The Taft bill, alas, and the national policy it represents, is no more mature than the policy that aggrivated in Asia in 1954.

Amendment Proposal Could Hike Senators' Pay

The Legislature Friday gave first-round approval to three proposed constitutional amendments, one of which would indirectly permit state senators to receive more pay.

The discussion of constitutional amendments on general file, the first of three steps in the legislative process, occupied the bulk of the Legislature's forenoon session.

The pay raise bill, introduced by Sen. David Stahmer of Omaha, would have originally pegged state senators at no more than one-half the governor's salary, now $25,000.

Option Established

But an amendment to LB311 adopted Friday struck that provision, substituting a new system under which the senators would continue to draw their present pay (no more than $400 per month) but would have the option of setting an additional per diem rate to be paid senators for work between legislative sessions.

"Obviously, the first consideration is what the people are willing to accept," Stahmer said of his bill.

"But there is a great deal of additional work to be done, and, in effect, this amendment would be a step to get more work out of the Legislature."

Wording Questioned

The bill advanced on a 30-4 vote. Little opposition to the measure appeared during floor debate, although a number of senators questioned the wording of the proposal.

"It's not plain, it's confusing," said Sen. Calvin Carsten of Avoca. He questioned whether the bill might actually reduce legislative compensation, restricting the $400 per month to only the five months actually spent in session.

But Stahmer assured him that the wording had been checked out with both the bill drafters' office and the State Attorney General and that they were both confident that the language was correct.

Stahmer also won approval of an amendment which would place the proposal on the primary ballot this spring.

Commission Bill Advanced

Also advanced Friday over some opposition was a proposed amendment which would require the legislature to appoint a constitutional revision study commission at least every 10 years. The commission would review the constitution and suggest possible changes to the Unicameral.

In its original form, LB623 would have required that the electorate get a chance to call a constitutional convention every 10 years, but that provision was struck by amendment Friday.

Sen. Herb Nore of Genoa, opposing the bill, said that it would "merely force us to spend $75,000 every 10 years whether we need it or not."

And Sen. Leslie Stull of Alliance said that it would only clutter the constitution. "I don't think we should try to legislate with the constitution," he said.

Sponsoring Sen. George Syas of Omaha argued, however, that the requirement is necessary because the Legislature is traditionally hesitant to order such in-depth studies. He said the recommendations could be ignored by the Legislature because there would be no requirement that the state actually pay out money to put the commission's recommendations on the ballot if the Legislature was opposed to it.

The bill advanced on a 26-8 vote.

Also advanced Friday was LB503, which would place a provision in the state constitution restricting felons from being collectors or custodians of public money or property unless their civil rights have been restored.

Four other constitutional amendment proposals appeared briefly before the body late in the forenoon session, but the senators voted to table consideration of them until Monday.

Mari Sandoz Day Is Asked

The Legislature Friday was asked to mark May 11 as Mari Sandoz Day in Nebraska.

The day is the birthday of the famed western authoress.

The request was contained in a resolution sponsored Friday by Sen. Leslie Stull of Alliance which also asked Nebraskans to "reflect on their heritage and remember their ancestors."

Bill Would Double Executive Board

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

The Legislature's Government and Military Affairs Committee Friday recommended that the size of the powerful Legislative Council executive board be more than doubled.

The executive board, which acts as the representative of the Legislature when it is now composed of five members.

Under terms of an amended version of LB1129, proposed by Sen. Fred Carstens of Beatrice, the size of the board would be increased to 11 senators.

Selection Outlined

Three members would be elected by the Legislature from each of the three congressional districts. Lawmakers would select a chairman from the Legislature at large, and the speaker would serve as the 11th member.

That plan attracted 5-0 committee approval and was sent to the floor for action.

Sen. William Swanson of Lincoln, current chairman of the executive board, agreed with Carstens that the body should be enlarged.

Its expanded duties and assignments are "frankly more than five people can handle," Swanson said.

Held For Action

The committee held for later action an amended version of LB1155, which would direct the Government Committee every other year to evaluate the state's civil defense program and recommend improvements and possible legislative changes to the Unicameral.

As originally introduced by Sen. Loran Schmit of David City, the bill would have removed the civil defense agency from the office of the adjutant general in order to provide civilian direction of the program.

But Schmit told the committee he has since learned that the agency is under civilian control in the form of the governor.

Maj. Gen. Lyle Welch, adjutant general and administrator of the civil defense program, said he "strongly favor(s) civilian control" and now operates under "carefully limited authority subject to the direction of the governor."

Also heard by the committee without opposition was LB1150, sponsored by Swanson, which provides for collection and equalization of Lincoln city taxes by Lancaster county subject to a joint agreement.

City Asks Snowmobiles Be Allowed On Streets

Representatives of the city of Lincoln asked Friday that snowmobiles be taken off the sidewalks and be allowed to operate on roadways within towns and cities.

The Legislature's Public Works Committee took no action on the bill involved, Oakland Sen. C. W. Holmquist's LB1149.

Lincoln City corporation counsel Ralph Nelson said that the 1971 law which laid down regulations for snowmobile operation requires snowmobiles to stay on the right side of the right-of-way.

"That may protect the interstate and highways pretty well," he said, "but in town we've got lawns and trees and sidewalks to worry about."

Holmquist's bill would let the snowmobiles be operated on the actual roadway except for highways, where the current law would still apply.

Also heard Friday without committee action was a bill to raise by $1 the cost of obtaining or filing a lien on a certificate of title for a motor vehicle. The fees are currently $2 and $1, respectively.

The proposal, in Alliance Sen. Leslie Stull's LB1113, was supported by the Nebraska Association of County Officials, who said that the extra dollar would stay with the counties.

It was opposed by representatives of the Nebraska Consumer Credit Association and the Nebraska Bankers Association, both of whom argued that the increase was unwarranted since the actual work involved "is a matter of minutes."

Also heard and held Friday were bills stiffening brake requirements on trailers and removing the city-owned Lincoln Bus line from the jurisdiction of the State Railway Commission.

Doctors' Aide Training Bill Is Approved

The Legislature gave final approval to the development of a physicians assistant training program at the University of Nebraska Medical Center in Omaha.

Sen. Loran Schmit of David City, chief sponsor of LB985, says the measure would ultimately give physicians another pair of hands to work with.

But the bill still faces the final hurdle of becoming a law in the governor's office. It was sent there on a 41-3 vote of the lawmakers.

If Gov. J. J. Exon signs the measure, the medical school would receive $96,000 for use in developing the training program for the assistants.

Schmit said the program would primarily benefit those physicians who are working in rural areas. Many of them, he said, work alone even though their case loads indicate the need for more than one doctor in order to provide adequate health care.

However, according to Schmit, the adoption of his training program bill is not the final step to providing the extra help.

The legislature will later have to come back and set up licensing procedures for the assistants once the NU training program is in operation.

Bills Passed

Bill passed on final reading Friday:

LB446E (Luedtke) — Providing that municipal court clerk salaries shall be set by the city council, 35-3.

LB492E (Warner) — Providing that second class cities and villages may draw warrants in excess of 85% of the current levy, 43-0.

LB574E (Proud) — Providing for acquisition of public buildings by first class cities, 41-2.

LB597 (Warner) — Providing for accumulation and investment of funds for street improvement projects by municipalities, 39-1.

LB593 (Proud, Luedtke) — Amending law related to bonds of indebtedness with respect to showing of interest rate, 41-0.

LB1049 (Swanson) — Harmonizing law related to civil procedures, 42-0.

LB537 (Burbach) — Requiring long range planning by natural resource districts, 40-0.

LB540 (Burbach) — Reducing from two to one mill the maximum levy for natural resource districts, 42-1.

LB541 (Burbach) — Restricting powers of soil and water conservation districts, 39-3.

LB710 (Waldron) — Prohibiting false campaign statements by candidates, 35-8.

LB985 (Schmit) — Authorizing University of Nebraska to develop a program for training physicians' assistants, 41-3.

LB1058 (Swanson) — Correcting sections of law related to highways, 44-0.

Fremont Council Is Asked To OK Sunday Liquor

Fremont (AP) — The Fremont City Council will be asked at its regular meeting Tuesday to approve an ordinance calling for the sale of liquor-by-the-drink on Sundays, Jack Sutton, city administrator reported.

The council must act no later than this if the proposition is to appear on the April 4 municipal election ballot.

Last May 25 liquor dealers in the county petitioned the council and in July the council voted to submit the proposal for Sunday liquor sales to the voters.

Three Measures Pass Changing 1969 NRD Bill

A trio of bills altering the natural district resource law adopted by the 1969 Legislature sailed through the Unicameral Friday on final reading.

The measures will become law when signed by Gov. J. J. Exon.

The results of an interim study committee review of the NRD program, the measures require long-range planning by the districts and halve from two to one mill the maximum levy a district may charge without an authorizing vote of the district electorate.

The 24 districts drawn up by the State Soil and Water Conservation Commission are scheduled to become effective July 1, replacing numerous local soil and water conservancy districts and watershed districts.

The three bills approved Friday were LB437, favored 40-0; LB540, approved 21-1; and LB541, with a 39-3 margin.

Besides lowering the mill levy, the measures require compliance by districts with the state's uniform budgeting act, require six-year planning by the districts, and restrict the investment power of the soil and water conservancy districts.

'Campaign Truth' Measure Passed By Legislature

The Legislature Friday passed 35-8 on final reading a measure said by its sponsor to be a "campaign truth" bill.

The law enacted as LB710, would prevent deliberately false statements by a political candidate.

Sponsored by Sen. J. James Waldron of Callaway, the measure prohibits the use of a statement the "user knows is false or which he uses in reckless disregard of the truth."

Once the prosecution proves the statement is false, the bill says, "the burden of proving lack of knowledge or reckless disregard of the truth shall be upon the defendant."

The measure provides a $500 fine and/or a jail sentence of up to six months.

EVENTS

IN PERSPECTIVE

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

There are undoubtedly times when the American people are their own worst enemy. Such may be the case in the matter of President Nixon's State of the Union message to Congress. First, comments are made by others that his call for statesmanship rather than partisanship is nice but impractical.

The assumption is that in this election year there will be plenty of politics and the President's appeal is itself dismissed as a political gimmick. Of course, we do have a two-party system and that is an adversary situation but wouldn't it be nice if, some time, we could have a Congress in which statesmanship was first and foremost?

Others dismiss the President's address as a reshuffle, a "recycling of the State of the Union," as Sen. Hubert Humphrey called it. Yet, the address included several new items, half a dozen highly significant pending proposals and some 90 other prospective areas of legislation.

For those without access to the text of Nixon's remarks, the speech contained an outline of principles worth repeating, principles on which the President seeks to advance the nation. They are:

"We believe in independence, and self-reliance, and in the creative value of the competitive spirit.

"We believe in full and equal opportunity for all Americans, and in the protection of individual rights and liberties.

"We believe in the family as the keystone of the community, and in the community as the keystone of the nation.

"We believe in compassion toward those in need.

"We believe in a system of law, justice and order as the basis of a genuinely free society.

"We believe that a person should get what he works for—and those who can should work for what they get.

"We believe in the capacity of people to make their own decisions, in their own lives and in their own communities—and we believe in their rights to make those decisions."

But such principles are all too often recited and then forgotten. What might we accomplish if we really dedicated ourselves to those principles and forgot about the many narrow interests that dictate our course of action?

The point is that there is a lot of meat and a lot of challenge to Congress and to the American people in the contents of the President's message. No, it is not a perfect address in that it would meet with the total approval of all people.

We have our own specific differences with it. Our own concern over the domestic economy and unemployment is growing and the message did not attack this with much vigor.

We agree with the Humphrey criticism which says that new federal aid for schools for the sake of property tax relief should come from income tax reform, not a value added tax. Our conviction is that income tax reform is one of the most pressing and vital needs in the nation today, an unexplored opportunity to better use the wealth of the nation for some of its urgent human needs.

It is disappointing, too, that defense spending continues to rise, that the national debt continues to climb and that the federal budget never operates any more in the black. Certainly, we can rest assured that an end to the Vietnam war would produce no problems in the area of reduced federal spending.

That war could end tomorrow and the economy would never know it. The financial slack would be picked up so quickly elsewhere that it is foolish to think of this as any problem at all.

But if we could obtain some of the statesmanship of which the President has spoken and if we could implement the principles that he cites, we might begin to make progress on many fronts, including those where the President himself might be doing an inadequate job.

The State of the Union as Nixon outlined it isn't a state of utopia but it could be charted in that direction if there were a real national will to do so.

Alaska Pipeline Decision To Be Forthcoming Soon

WASHINGTON — Underneath the permafrost of Alaska's North Slope lie upwards of 10 billion barrels of oil. On the surface lies tundra — an undulating plain usually covered with grass, lichen, sedge and moss. Oil and tundra do not mix, and that explains why the decision on whether to build the Trans-Alaska Pipeline has generated such a heated controversy.

The proposed 48-inch pipeline would extend 789 miles from Prudhoe Bay on the North Slope to the ice-free port of Valdez in southern Alaska. Some segments of the line would be buried, others elevated. It would cross 350 streams and rivers. Its construction would require thousands of workers, fleets of heavy machinery, massive quantities of materials, and a total expenditure of at least $2 billion.

In defense of the pipeline project, the oil companies point out that proven North Slope reserves equal about a third of the combined reserves of all other oil-producing states. The royalties, jobs, and other benefits stemming from full-time oil production would ease the perennial financial woes of Alaska. But all these considerations are outweighed, environmentalists argue, by the fact that the pipeline could permanently damage the Arctic environment. In its final environmental impact statement on the project, expected shortly, the Interior Department will determine whether or not the pipeline is built.

Alaska's ecology is as fragile as its climate is harsh. When summer comes to the Arctic, the sun warms the tundra until it thaws and becomes spongy muck, held together only by its thin cover of vegetation. If this cover is stripped away, rapid erosion follows. Thus, in a matter of days a drainage ditch becomes a gully and a trail a virtual quagmire. Experts say that once tundra is removed it can take up to 40 years to regenerate.

Ecologists contend that a surface pipeline is certain to scar the tundra. A subsurface route would create even greater problems. Studies indicate that a buried line, carrying oil at temperatures of up to 180 degrees F, within a few years would thaw a cylinder of soil 20 to 30 feet in diameter. Since each mile of pipeline would contain almost half a million gallons of crude oil, such thawing might cause warping or rupture and hence a massive spill.

There are other hazards, too. Authorities on wildlife fear that the pipeline might disrupt the migration patterns of hundreds of thousands of caribou. And seismologists warn that the project would cross several fault lines; Alaska, like California, has a long history of severe earthquakes.

Available evidence indicates that the Alaska Pipeline will get a green light from the Interior Department. Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton said on Dec. 3 that he was "confident that we have covered all the environmental stipulations and that a permit will be issued."

Even if Morton is proved wrong, all is not lost for the oil companies which hold $900 million worth of North Slope leases. A Canadian consortium is studying the feasibility of building a pipeline from the Yukon to Edmonton, Alberta. It would be possible to extend the line to Prudhoe Bay to accommodate Alaskan oil. The companies on the North Slope have displayed little interest in this alternative route so far, but a change of heart may be forced upon them.

Report Held Back Again

Mayor Schwartzkopf said Thursday that on the advice of City Atty. Dick Wood, release of the Human Rights Commission's report of its investigation into alleged police brutality will be held until a decision is handed down on Cleveland Randolph's resisting arrest charge.

Thus the report might not be made public for several weeks. The Randolph case went to trial earlier this month, but Municipal Judge Donald Grant allowed both the prosecution and defense attorneys in the case 30 days to file briefs before he reaches a decision.

The Randolph case served as the initial impetus for the investigation. The young black, who pleaded innocent to resisting arrest charges in connection with an Oct. 24th City-County Jail incident, also has alleged he was brutally beaten by three Lincoln police officers at the jail. The matter was referred to the rights commission by the City Council. The commission broadened the scope of the investigation, however, and took 38 hours of testimony as a group as well as investigating individually to determine the status of police-community relationships.

The mayor and the council met privately

Wednesday night for 4½ hours to go over the commission's findings. Mayor Schwartzkopf said Thursday that the group will need to hold additional meetings to complete its review, giving that as a second reason for withholding the report.

We think the reasoning behind moving back the public release date fails. Judge Grant said during the Randolph trial that he was not concerned with whether there was any alleged or actual police brutality in deciding the case, but was "focusing attention strictly on whether this individual (Randolph) resisted arrest." Even without the judge's comment it hardly seems the report would be prejudicial to the outcome of the case. Besides, the scope of the entire investigation transcends the Randolph case in importance.

As to council review, the council has seen the report and quite rightfully should expect to have as many questions answered as are asked. But the council's deliberations will not or should not change the commission's findings.

What was originally intended as an "immediate investigation" into police brutality has turned into a long, drawn-out, secretive affair that goes against the best interests of Lincoln citizens and the police department.

Probation Concept Challenged

Traffic safety has become one of the more important issues of the day in Nebraska, due in no small part to last year's record for highway carnage and the fact that the state is not off to a very good start in 1972. A number of proposals from a variety of platforms have been offered in hopes of reducing the number of traffic accidents.

At a Regional Traffic Safety Conference in Omaha this week, Omaha Mayor Eugene Leahy found some support for his theory that higher fines would discourage motorists from violating traffic laws and thus, perhaps, curtail accidents. The suggestion is that judges need to crack down and assess the maximum fines allowed under the law.

The theory can be argued. We're not so sure that excessive fines will work toward decreasing the number of accidents.

Participants at the same conference decided to seek a change in state law to provide that driver's license penalty points be taken from motorists convicted of a traffic violation but then placed on probation. Currently, points are not assessed against persons on probation.

Lincoln Municipal Judges Thomas McManus and Neal Dusenberry oppose such a change, especially in regard to those persons who face the loss of their license because of points being assessed against them.

Loss of license would result in a loss of incentive to go on probation, the Lincoln judges argue, and thus the change would "absolutely destroy our whole probationary and counter-measures programs," according to McManus.

The probationary programs have worked beautifully, the judges argue, with statistics to back them up. People are better drivers because of the educational program. The Lincoln Municipal Court experience suggests that the proposed change in the law would be ill-advised.

JAMES RESTON

Demo Politicians Picking At Nixon Speech; Britain Would Use More Orderly Approach

WASHINGTON — President Nixon's State of the Union address is a reminder that most men can easily agree when they concentrate on the objectives and goals of life. Republican and Democrat, socialist and communist, Christian, Jew, Moslem and Hindu all unite in their yearnings for peace, security, equality, and mutual respect in a unified society.

Where they divide most bitterly is on the means by which these noble ends are to be reached. This, in fact, is what politics and government are all about.

Who can question Nixon's call for "high statesmanship," for putting the nation before personal and party interest, or "going forward together" to a world of security, peace, and full-employment, with mutual respect and a generous regard for the rights and feelings of our fellow-countrymen?

Nobody is going to argue against his defense of independence, self-reliance, honest work, fair pay, law, justice, order, the family, and clean air and water, but on how these desirable things are to be achieved, the nation has always been divided, and is still deeply divided today.

The surprising thing about these beginning-of-the-year presidential speeches is not, however, that presidents concentrate on the things that unite the nation — most of them follow the same procedure — but that the American presidential system of government, unlike the system of parliamentary democracy, does not make provision for a formal and illuminating debate on what he says.

There was something mean and unworthy about the cheap jibes of most of the Democratic politicians after the President's address. He avoided the hard questions, but his speech had scope and dignity, and in its closing passages, a certain nobility of phrase and manner. As usual, however, it was dismissed by most Democratic legislators as an empty, platitudinous evasion of responsibility.

This would not happen, however, or at least would not happen so often, if the State of the Union address were the beginning of an honest political inquiry by the members of Congress into the true state of the nation instead of a television spectacle.

It will be said that such an inquiry will eventually be made in the coming months of the 92nd Congress, and this is true, but it will be spread out over months of disjointed discussion and there will be no coherence or continuity to the debate which can be followed by the people at the beginning of a presidential year.

In the House of Commons, such an address by the head of the government on the state of the nation would be followed first, by a speech by the leader of the opposition on the same subject, then by one or two days of general debate, and finally by a summing up by government and the opposition, each answering the main points in dispute.

There is nothing in the American system that forbids such an orderly procedure. The Democrats are in control of both houses of the Congress. The titular head of the Democratic party, Hubert Humphrey, is a member of the Senate sitting alongside a majority of the men who are challenging Nixon for the presidency.

Under such a procedure, it would be possible to measure the Democratic candidates against the man they are seeking to replace, and move the discussion along from generalities to specifics in such a way that the voters could test the qualities of mind and character of the candidates and find out what alternative programs they have to offer, if any.

Instead, what we now have is a one-sided proclamation, extolling the virtues and progress of the nation, and avoiding most of the blundering statesmanship, divisive policies, un-

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH

They Had A Dream

In the entire history of the American labor movement, only one black man ever emerged as a national leader. That one man was A. Philip Randolph who founded the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters in 1925 and served as its president for more than 40 years.

Randolph also was a vice president of the AFL-CIO with which the brotherhood was affiliated and a member of the AFL-CIO's executive committee. From that base, he fought for the laboring man and also battled discrimination both within the unions and without. He came to be recognized as one of the most influential leaders in the civil rights movement and one of its most effective spokesmen.

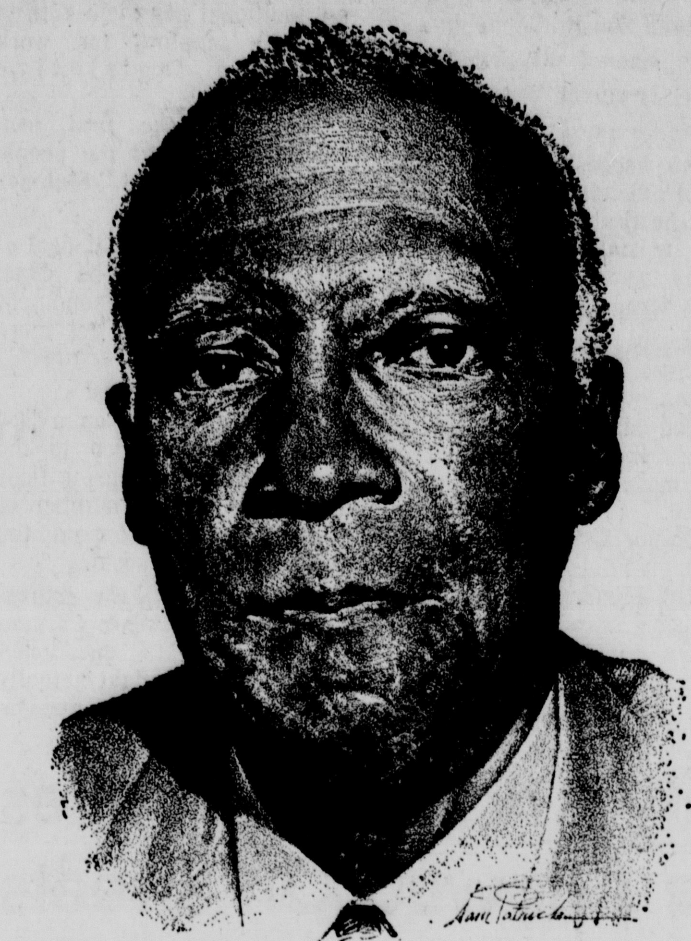

Born in Crescent City, Fla., in 1889, Randolph was the son of a minister in the African Methodist Church. As a boy he worked as a grocery store clerk, sold newspapers and picked up other odd jobs. When he grew older, Randolph laid track for the railroad.

When he finished high school at Cookman Institute in Jacksonville, Randolph left home for New York City where he worked as an elevator operator, porter and waiter while attending New York City College.

A self-styled radical at the age of 28, Randolph joined with a friend in publishing a monthly magazine called the Messenger. It was billed as "the only radical Negro magazine in America. Later he contributed articles to other publications and then took a fling at politics by running unsuccessfully as the Socialist candidate in 1921 for New York secretary of state.

Randolph was active in the labor movement almost from the day he arrived in New York. He helped organize an elevator operators' union and lost his job for attempting to organize the waiters on a local railroad.

In 1925, he decided to try to organize sleeping-car porters who worked up to 400 hours a month for a wage of $67.50. It took him 12 years to win the union's first contract which cut porters' work hours in half and more than tripled their salaries.

Randolph was a warrior and conflict was what he came to expect. "You've got to fight for what you get," he once said. "I've been at many a conference table negotiating agreements, and I don't know of a single instance where anything was given without exacting it from the other side."

He carried this philosophy into the labor movement itself, agitating for equal treatment of blacks by the unions and becoming a thorn in the side of AFL-CIO president George Meany. In 1961, he was censured by the union for the accusations he made.

In 1941, Randolph organized a march on Washington to protest discrimination in defense plants. The march was called off when President Roosevelt yielded to the pressure and signed an executive order banning such discrimination.

Seven years later, Randolph and other black leaders launched another fight against discrimination in the military, which resulted in another executive order signed by President Truman.

Randolph conceived and organized the march on Washington in 1963, which drew 250,000 persons and brought pressure on Congress for civil rights legislation.

Five years later, Randolph retired as president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

Positive Leadership

Lincoln, Neb.

It is disgusting, yet amusing, to listen to the near-hysterical mouthings of the governor and certain members of the Legislature concerning Coach Devaney and the "Coach of the Year" award. I'm sure their loud wailing is small comfort to Devaney. He must have wanted that award as much as he wanted a national championship team. There is no greater satisfaction than receiving the acclaim of your peers — and he should have had that ultimate achievement.

Perhaps the reason for the loud outcries from the Capitol are pangs of conscience. Surely the powers that be must realize that nothing they have done in the past year has assisted Coach Devaney (witness the fieldhouse fiasco) — and nothing they have done has advanced the state of Nebraska one iota in any area, particularly in the eyes of the rest of the country. As long as Nebraska maintains the penny-pinching, regressive image it now holds, we cannot expect proper national acclaim — even in the field of athletics. Nebraska is judged on criteria other than her football laurels — even though Big Red fans don't like to face up to that fact. Until we are willing to excel in other areas and bring our beloved state into the 20th Century, along with the other 49 individuals such as Coach Devaney will continue to be denied the acclaim which should be theirs.

We need positive leadership from the State Capitol rather than the negativism of budget-slashing, worthwhile programs being cut or eliminated altogether, with the ensuing low morale and destructive force which these actions generate. We are continually hearing of economies in state government; yet budgets exceed by millions budgets of the previous administration. Because of the prosperity of Nebraskans, taxes collected last year were far above expectation, yet sales and income taxes were raised. There is much talk of economy, yet increased amounts continue to be spent without visible progress in any area.

The state CAN afford progressive programs. Nebraska ranks at the top in per capita income for the entire United States and at the very bottom in per capita state taxes paid.

Until we taxpayers are willing to demand proper leadership in our State Capitol — in order to advance our state to excellence in every area of state government — we will have to be content with the blurred image Nebraska now endures from the rest of the nation — and even Bob Devaney and his double national championship Cornhuskers cannot overcome that deficiency for us.

If the same amount of energy, enthusiasm and dollars expended by Big Red fans could be dispensed accordingly to promote Nebraska in all areas, Coach Devaney then couldn't be denied the acclaim from other coaches of the nation which he so rightly deserves.

Too Much

Accordingly, what we had was a graceful speech, with less partisan rancor in it than in most such talks at the beginning of an election year, but it clearly tells us more about the state of the President's mind than about the true state of the nation.

bread-winners are going to be asked to support a public baby-sitting program for those people who insist on both members of the household being in the nation's work force. We have to support programs of rejuvenation of the child who is maladjusted because he does not receive the needed parental guidance. We have to work for lower wages because women are a source of unorganized and thus cheap labor. We have in our society a great deal of unemployment; this unemployment includes many men with families who could be earning a respectable living for their families if it were not for all the women in society working mostly for cheap wages) just to add what might be termed "frosting" to their husbands' already adequate salaries.

And now they are pressing for public baby-sitting for their neglected children. The sad part is that they are very likely to succeed. I can understand such a service for women who are the only support for their families, but something is wrong with a society which denies large segments of the available male work force a chance to pursue a reasonable survival, while favoring unneeded segments with such mercenary programs.

Conclusion: Such programs are only half thought out; such programs are devised by self-interest groups (white, upper-middle-class segment of our society); such programs are going to compound, not solve our problems; such casual behavior by a portion of our society is causing deterioration of our whole society.

Profane Talk

Salem, Ore.

When I was postmaster in a small town here in Oregon, my nearest neighbor was Curt Goodrich. One Sunday he was out pruning rosebushes in his front yard. I went over to visit with him, as he was a very wise man and I knew I might learn something from him.

His old dog, Sandy, was with him. Soon another neighbor came who was noted for his profane and dirty talk. He started in. At once Curt said, "Sandy, go to the house." Sandy did not move and Curt repeated the order.

The man said, "You need not send him to the house. He's not bothering me." Curt said, "I know, but I don't want him to hear your kind of talk."

LIFE BEGINS AT FORTY:

Lonely Divorcee, 50, Is Considering Remarriage With Bossy, Unromantic Ex-Husband

By ROBERT PETERSON

Question: "I'm 50 and got a divorce last year after 20 monotonous years with a man who was never really bad but was never much good, either. He liked being the boss and even insisted on buying my clothes and the groceries. He gave me only five dollars a week spending money, yet he refused to let me take a job and earn money of my own. He talked little and I never knew what he was thinking. He must have had a girl somewhere because he doled out his romance on a strictly once a month basis. I've been on my own for a year and he gives me $200 monthly alimony. Last week he came over, says he's lonely, and wants me to remarry him. I'm lonely too, and don't see any other marital prospects. Would I be crazy going back to him?"

Answer: No. If you're lonely, something is better than nothing. But make a few premarital demands. Much of the monotony in your marriage apparently stemmed largely from being at home too much, with a feeling of being boxed in, without independence or money of your own for personal projects or shopping sprees.

Property Tax For Police, Fire Only Urged

Property taxes should be used only to finance police and fire protection, Wallace Peterson of Lincoln said.

Peterson, chairman of the University of Nebraska's Department of Economics, is a candidate for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

"There is a reasonable relationship between property owned and benefits received from police and fire protection," Peterson wrote in this week's issue of The Nebraska Farmer.

As a general principle, he said, taxes ought to be based either upon ability to pay or upon benefits received.

Financing education should become a state, rather than a local, duty, Peterson said. The shift to this method of financing must be coupled with the mandatory elimination of property tax levies for education, he said.

"This proposed shift does not contemplate any basic change in our system of local control of educational programs through locally-elected school boards," Peterson stressed.

"Local school districts should

Tell him you may take him back if he lets you take a job or gives you a more generous allowance. And you may as well ask him to let you do the shopping, and demand henceforth a believable explanation for any nights he plans to come dragging in at midnight.

Question: "I thought everyone loved birthday parties. My late wife did—we had dozens of big parties. Last week I planned a big surprise for my new wife's 57th birthday. While she was clearing up the supper dishes some 45 guests appeared at the door. I thought she's get a kick out of it, but instead she went upstairs and started crying. Said she hates birthdays and surprise parties and couldn't understand how I'd do something like this to her. She wouldn't come down until I promised there'd be no more birthday parties. Is something wrong with her?"

Answer: Most people enjoy natal day recognition. But it's my observation that maybe 10% of people that maybe obsession about birthdays and would rather not be reminded of them. The cause seems to stem from poor attitudes toward growing older and a desire to feel immune from the aging process. It may also stem from extreme sensitivity to the brevity and tenuousness of life—a desire to forget the passage of another milestone signaling one less year in the lifespan.

Question: "I'm 65 but everyone takes me for 45 or 50 and I never tell them differently. I enjoy being taken for younger and spend two hours a day on my cosmetics and appearance. What's wrong with that?"

Answer: There's nothing

The other major step for modernizing local government taxes is to make more extensive use of user charges for services, Peterson said.

MISS JANICE SCHUKEI

In the news this morning, also is the announcement made by Mr. and Mrs. Reinhold Schukei, Jr., of the engagement of their daughter, Janice Lynn, to David Schweitz son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Schweitz of Fullerton.

The wedding is planned for the late summer.

Miss Schukei is a sophomore at the University of Nebraska where she is a member of Kappa Delta sorority.

Mr. Schweitz was graduated last year from the University of Nebraska College of Business Administration and is a member of Chi Phi fraternity. He now is attending the U.S. Army Officer Candidate School at Fort Jackson, S.C.

MISS GERALDINE MCGOWAN

Mr. and Mrs. John Michael McGowan of Omaha make announcement this morning of the engagement of their daughter, Geraldine Patricia, to Douglas James Frost, also of Omaha, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry James Frost of Charles City, Iowa.

The wedding is planned for June.

Miss McGowan was graduated in December from the University of Nebraska where she is a member of Alpha Omicron Pi sorority of which she served as president.

Mr. Frost also is a graduate of the University of Nebraska and his fraternity is Kappa Sigma.

BETROTHALS

MISS DEBORAH HOWELL

Town and campus circles will share interest this morning in the announcement made by Dr. and Mrs. D. L. Howell of Beatrice, of the engagement of their daughter, Deborah, to C. John Guenzel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Guenzel of Lincoln.

Saturday, May 20, has been chosen as the date of the wedding.

Miss Howell is a sophomore at the University of Nebraska.

Mr. Guenzel was graduated from Kemper Military Academy at Booneville, Mo., and now is attending the University of Nebraska where he is a member of Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

MISS MARY ANN KEAN

Sorority Row on the University of Nebraska campus is busy with news of betrothals this morning.

Among them is the announcement made by Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Kean of Dawson, of the engagement of their daughter, Mary Ann, to John Chaney, son of Charles F. Chaney of Falls City.

A late summer wedding is planned.

Miss Kean is a senior at the University of Nebraska where she is a member of Alpha Phi sorority, Little Sisters of Minerva and of Alpha Lambda Delta honorary, and where she is majoring in art.

Mr. Chaney was graduated from the University of Nebraska College of Business Administration, and now is associated with the Falls City Federal Savings and Loan. His fraternity is Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

MISS CHERYL HOOPS

Announcement is made this morning by Mr. and Mrs. Wilber Hoops of Deshler, of the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Cheryl, to Richard Linder, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Linder of Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Saturday, April 22, is named as the date of the wedding.

Miss Hoops is a graduate of the Bryan Memorial Hospital School of Nursing, and now is a member of the nursing staff at Bryan Hospital.

Mr. Linder is a graduate of Peru State College, and recently completed a tour of duty with the U.S. Army.

Happy Hollow Heights Skyline Terrace Meadow Lane

Although Lincoln residents are, at the present time, supposed to be enjoying that fabled "long winter's nap" that, allegedly, should last until warm weather is once again with us, we have a feeling that there are actually very few individuals currently in a state of hibernation. Activity in the suburban areas would indicate that things are far from "sleepy" in this particular city.

Last weekend was especially festive for one member of the Happy Hollow Heights younger generation. The young lady we have reference to is Miss Lauri Thompson who spent last Saturday, Jan. 15, celebrating her tenth birthday. Lauri, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred P. Thompson, invited three of her friends to join her for an afternoon of ice skating, followed by a cake and ice cream party at her home. Taking part in the fun were Jean Ann Larsen, Susan Nelson and Barbara Jones.

Winter traveling seems to be an ever-popular pastime, and included among those who recently have taken to the road—or perhaps we should say the airlines—were Mr. and Mrs. Garry A. Powell. On Saturday, Jan. 8, they flew from Lincoln to Williamsburg, Va., where they spent six days in attendance at a Young Life Staff Conference.

Two other Lincoln residents who also attended the conference were Mr. and Mrs. Bill Erickson.

A trip of a bit longer duration took Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Moore from their Meadow Lane home to Europe and back again during the first part of January. Mr. and Mrs. Moore returned on Wednesday from a three-week trip which took them into six European countries.

The first stop on their itinerary was Madrid, Spain, where they spent three days sightseeing in the city and the surrounding countryside. From there, they continued on to France for a four-day visit which gave the travelers sufficient time to see the major points of interest in Paris.

A brief stop in Zurich, Switzerland preceded a five-day sojourn in Italy where they took in the sights in Rome and Naples. In Germany, they found Munich and Hanover much to their liking; and their last stop before returning to the United States, was in London.

Incidentally, we should also mention the fact that, on their way back to Nebraska, Mr. and Mrs. Moore did find time to stop in Hartford, Conn., where they enjoyed a short visit with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Landis Calloway and children, Angela, Scott and Brian.

One of the busiest homes in the Meadow Lane neighborhood this weekend just happens to be the one belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Sorensen. Arriving in Lincoln later today for a family reunion will be nine members of Mrs. Sorensen's family all of whom will be guests at the Sorensen home.

Among those participating in the get-together will be Mrs. Sorensen's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Damrow, and her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Damrow and children, Cal and Lisa, all of Des Moines, Iowa; and her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Everett and daughter, Cynthia, who make their home in Carroll, Iowa.

On Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Damrow will be the guests of honor at a dinner which will take place at the Sorensen home in honor of their 45th wedding anniversary.

The visitors will return to their respective homes late Sunday afternoon.

Saying good-bye to a friend, who is moving to another city is never a pleasant affair. A "going away" party does help however, to make the best of such an occurrence. Serving as hostess for just such a farewell courtesy, which will take place this evening, is Miss Karen Vogel, daughter of Skyline Terrace residents, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Vogel.

Guest of honor at the festivities, which will take place at the Vogel home, will be Miss Alice Russell who with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Russell, is moving to Dallas, Tex., in the very near future.

On hand for the fun will be a number of Miss Russell's East High School classmates.

Bridge: the safety play

B. Jay Becker

Partner bids Three Hearts, both sides vulnerable next player passes. What would you bid now with each of the following five hands? (Assume that Three Hearts shows a long suit with very little defensive strength and that its chief purpose is to hamper the opponents.)

1. ♠K983 ♥A7 ♦J962 ♣A85
2. ♠KQ75 ♥84 ♦A10 ♣AQ932
3. ♠6 ♥J962 ♦AQ873 ♣764
4. ♠A8 ♥95 ♦AJ84 ♣AKQ73
5. ♠AQ9876 ♥3 ♦A95 ♣942

1. Pass. The three heart bid announces a hand that does not qualify as a one bid by ordinary standards. The high-card content is usually 7 to 10 points. It is mainly a defensive gesture where the opener thinks that his side is outgunned and the opponents have a good chance for a game, perhaps a slam.

Since opener states he has less than an opening bid, and this hand is also somewhat less than in opening bid — and it ordinarily takes two opening bids to make game — the best bet is to pass and hope that partner can make nine tricks.

2. Four hearts. Here there is bound to be a reasonable chance for game. Our opening bid plus, faced by partner's opening bid minus, will probably produce ten tricks. There should be no compunctions about raising with only two trumps, for partner probably has a seven-card suit.

3. Four hearts. This may seem strange in view of the previous comments, but the raise is simply a strategic maneuver. There is not much chance of the bluff succeeding, since the enemy can surely make a huge number of tricks in either spades or clubs, but very little harm can come from putting on a bold front. You might even get lucky and come home scot-free.

4. Six hearts. No guarantees go with this bid either, but prospects of making a slam are nevertheless very good. About all that partner needs for a shot at twelve tricks is something like seven hearts to the K-G-J and a side king.

5. Pass. You can't fight City Hall. Making a game is out of the question, and three spades (forcing) would almost surely make matters worse. It must be borne in mind that partner has announced a poor hand suitable only for hearts, so why look for trouble?

MISS ARLENE BUSBOOM

This morning Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Busboom make announcement of the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Arlene Kay, to Gerald T. Giraud, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Giraud.

The wedding will take place on Saturday, March 18.

Mr. Giraud is a former student at the University of South Dakota and will be attending the University of Nebraska in the autumn.

Abby: you had right idea

DEAR ABBY: I am a school teacher. The other day another teacher told me in the presence of the school nurse and some office secretaries, that she had seen a woman shoplift a purse in a local store.

I asked her if she reported the incident to anyone, and she said she had not. I then told her that I thought she had an obligation to report it.

A discussion followed. One person agreed with me. Another said, "If that woman was stealing, she must have been very hard up and needed to steal so it would have been unkind to report her."

Another said, "I'd have minded my own business because if I made such an accusation and wasn't able to prove it, I could be sued for slander."

Now I'd like your opinion, Abby.

AN EX ANGELENO

DEAR EX: I would have reported it. To quote Edmund Burke (again), "All that is necessary for evil to triumph is for good men to do nothing."

DEAR ABBY: We have a very surly, selfish son in law who is married to our only child.

She is a wonderful girl and we love her very much, but we just can't understand him. He treats our daughter all right as far as we can see, but he treats us terribly.

When we invite the two of them for supper, she usually comes alone. She's embarrassed, but confesses she couldn't get him to come with her. When he does come, he eats fast and wants to run away right after the meal is over.

We have given them a lot of financial help. We bought them a nice little house and are helping them furnish it. We even bought them a second car.

I was in the hospital for two weeks and he never came to see me once. He didn't even send me a card!

Would it be childish for us to treat him like he treats us? I mean stop all financial help? I wouldn't want to hurt my daughter, but someone should teach this fellow a lesson.

HURT
Dear HURT: Any financial help you give him was undoubtedly more for your daughter's sake than his. Don't reward his indifference and rudeness with generosity, but be careful how you "teach him a lesson" or your daughter might wind up paying for the lesson.

Omaha Boy Sees Again After 48 Hours

Omaha, Neb. (AP) — Tom Christopherson will be glad to return to Northwest High School, even though he faces final exams.

After 48 hours of blindness, just about everything is a welcome sight.

About two weeks ago the high school junior began experiencing headaches and his vision, though not seriously impaired, began to fail him when he "looked at things far away."

A physician found no physical problems and, young Christopherson said, the problem seemed to be lessening. But last Thursday the headaches returned, his vision was again impaired, and he was sent home from school.

By Friday morning, Tom was blind.

The night before his doctor had been unable to find an organic cause for the problem.

"I panicked at first — but I cooled off," Christopherson recalled, "I was confident my sight would return."

By Sunday, the youth's optimism began to be rewarded.

His sight slowly began to return. The first thing appearing in his brief world of darkness was the beam of a doctor's flashlight.

This week his sight was restored to the point where he could read a sports magazine — but doctors still don't know why he was shrouded in darkness for those 48 hours.

"After your sight comes back," he observed, "you don't care so much about the why."

The young man said he would return to school, with a deeper appreciation of friends and friendship that saw him through what must have seemed the longest 48 hours of his life.

He hopes to again play football — he was a starting tackle on his high school team, and as his doctor put it "to back to being himself."

About the final exams that begin this week Tom Christopherson observes: "I'm anxious to get back — final exams and all."

State Per Capita Income Up More Than National

During the decade 1959-1969 per capita personal income in Nebraska rose 71.4% from $1,976 to $3,600 annually, according to an analysis done by the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

According to Dr. E. S. Wallace, director of the Bureau, about one third of this gain was cancelled out by rising prices but the other two-thirds represented an increase in real income.

The rate of growth in real income per person in the state and in most of its counties and regions exceeded that in the nation. In 1959 Nebraska's per capita income was $185 below the national average; in 1969, the difference was only $87.

Analysis Differs
Dr. Wallace notes that for purposes of analyzing the performance of an economy, total personal income is one of the appropriate measures. For purposes of evaluating individual economic welfare, however, personal income figures should be placed on a per capita basis by dividing total income by the number of people.

The study of per capita income figures from 1959 to 1969 shows that all Nebraska counties showed substantial income growth, that 77 counties exceeded the national growth rate and that 46 counties more than doubled their per capita personal income during the decade. At the beginning of the decade 12 counties had per capita income in excess of the national average and by the end this number had increased to 23.

There was a positive relationship between population growth of counties and the size of income but an inverse relationship between population growth and per capita income growth.

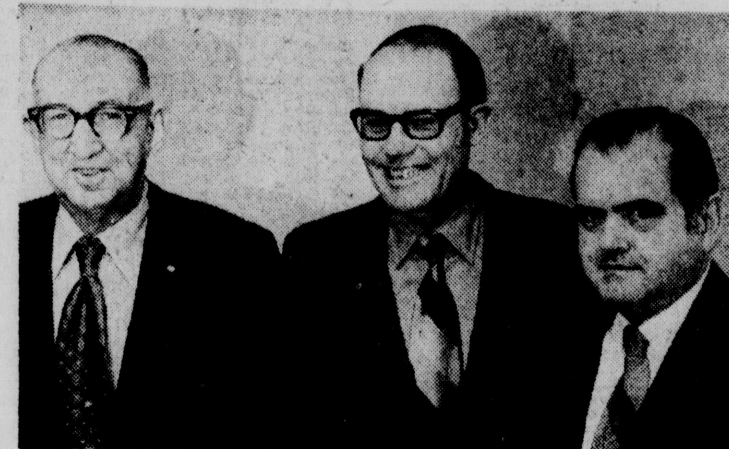

Examples Cited
For example counties that had population growth exceeding 2% had per capita income increases of only slightly more than 66%, while in those that had changes of less than 2% the income figure increased 89.9% and in those that declined more than 2% it went up 102.4%.

There was also a positive relationship between urbanization of the counties and amount of income but an inverse relationship between urbanization and per capita income growth.

Nebraska's three metropolitan counties showed per capita income increases of 60.2%; 18 other counties that are more than 50% urban had per capita income increase averaging 80.2%; 19 counties less than 50% urban recorded increase of 93.7% and 52 counties with no urban population gain 111.6%.

From this evidence it is quite clear, Dr. Wallace says, that Nebraska's advance in per capita income has not come primarily in the areas of urban development and population growth. It is equally obvious, he says, that the per capita income growth during the sixties could not have come in the absence of net out-migration.

If the improvement of the average income level is to be sustained and out-migration avoided, additional economic opportunities must be provided, he concludes.

AG COUNCIL OFFICERS . . . Jensen, left, Hodge and Free.

Officers Are Elected By Agriculture Council

The Nebraska Agriculture Council Friday selected an entire new slate of officers for 1972. Holly Hodge of Holdrege was elected president, Hans O. Jensen of Aurora was named vice president and Doyle Free of Lincoln will serve as secretary-treasurer.

Hodge represents the Nebraska-Wyoming Wheat Growers, Jensen the Nebraska Association of Farmer-Elected Committeemen and Free the Nebraska Poultry Industries Inc.

The council is made up of representatives of several general farm organizations and commodity groups from throughout the state.

Extension Favored
The council called for an extension of the dates for grazing diverted acres to permit the grazing of wheatland that needs to be taken out of production. The current non-grazing dates begin April 1 when there has been little wheat growth. The council suggested June 1 would be a better date.

The council also pointed out that there is an inequity between the winter wheat grower who has to plow under a crop that is already planted and the spring wheat grower who simply leaves his land idle under the set-aside program.

The council suggested that an additional set-aside be taken from other cropland on the farm.

They also suggested that the Senate act promptly on the feed grain reserve bill which would raise loan levels on feed grain and wheat. The council also passed a resolution expressing its appreciation of the support of the Nebraska legislature for the bill.

The council called upon the USDA to update its yield figures on farms which had installed irrigation systems to enable the farmer to recover a part of the additional investment.

The council discribed as partisan politics the voting for confirmation of Secretary of Agriculture Butz as invalid. The council suggested that the objection to Butz stemmed from his background, including his association with firms whose activities in agriculture have spurred the demise of the family type of agriculture.

'Held Accountable'
The resolution said: "We feel that those people who voted for and supported Earl Butz as Secretary of Agriculture did so over the objection of a great many farmers and farm organizations. Therefore, these people should be held accountable to the voters in their respective states for the Secretary's performance."

Retiring council president Ray Ratliff described the resolution as "a blunt reminder to Sen. Carl Curtis that he voted for Butz and that we are watching his performance."

Ratliff indicated that he believed Curtis was wavering in his support of the feed grain reserve bill and its 25% hike in loan rates.

The organization discussed new safety regulations but could not agree on a position. They will re-examine the safety regulations at their next regular monthly meeting.

Mayor Denies Accusation That Probe 'Whitewashed'

Charges that the mayor and City Council are attempting to whitewash the Human Rights Commission investigation into alleged police brutality were labeled a "publicity stunt" by Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf Friday.

Louis Cooper, human rights coordinator for the Lincoln Action Program (LAP), accused city government of "being corrupt in an attempt to whitewash" the Commission's report.

Cooper called for immediate release of the report and said he has taken steps to bring in a federal investigating team which would examine police-community relations, the Human Rights Commission and "certain actions" of Mayor Schwartzkopf.

Charges 'Unfounded'
Mayor Schwartzkopf responded in a press release that, "These charges are unfounded and without fact. They are a product of an outsider who has come to Lincoln in an attempt to disorganize and disrupt our community and its normal city government procedure."

Cooper said during his trip to Washington, D.C., last week he talked to U.S. Rep. Donald Edwards of California, who is chairman of the Civil Rights Committee, and to George Dalley, a committee staff member.

Cooper said that as a result of that meeting he was assured that an investigation into Lincoln's community relations would be forthcoming.

Murder Brings Life Sentence

Antonio Vigil, who pleaded guilty to first-degree murder in connection with the December, 1970, slaying of his wife, Carol, was sentenced Friday to life imprisonment by Lancaster District Judge William Hastings.

In sentencing the 29-year-old former Lincoln City Lines bus driver, Judge Hastings said that after reviewing the pre-sentence investigation by the adult probation office he could in "good conscience" impose the life sentence rather than the death penalty.

Vigil, who had pleaded guilty Oct. 18 to the charge, later filed a motion to withdraw his plea which was subsequently overruled by the court.

In his motion, Vigil had said he felt he was guilty of murder, but not murder in the first degree.

After a hearing on the motion, Judge Hastings stated "this court does not know how a plea could be any more voluntary."

According to the transcript, Vigil agreed to plead guilty to the charge if the county attorney would recommend to the court that a life sentence be imposed.

Mrs. Vigil's nude, decapitated body was discovered New Year's Eve, 1970, in a gully about 10 miles west of Lincoln.

Youth Receives Prison Sentence On Drug Charge

North Platte (UPI) — Albert Bradley Raetz, 19, of North Platte was given a one to two-year sentence in the Nebraska Penal Complex for possession of 70 LSD tablets.

Raetz said he will appeal and bond was set at $5,000.

District Court Judge High Stuart ordered that Raetz complete a 45-day sentence in the Lincoln County Jail on a previous conviction of marijuana possession before starting the penitentiary term.

Norfolk Attorney Disbarred

By The Associated Press
Former Madison County Atty. Milton D. Ellwood of Norfolk has been disbarred by order of the state Supreme Court, a check of court records showed Friday.

The order was entered last month and was effective Thursday.

The court ordered the disbarment, noting that Ellwood was "engaged in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit and misrepresentation."

Ellwood had been cited with improper and unethical handling of money in six cases involving estates. At the time he was also Madison County attorney.

The six counts alleged five specific estate cases involving a total of some $9,000. The sixth count listed several other estate cases with no mention of funds.

Court records show that Ellwood appeared voluntarily before the court and surrendered his license without a court hearing.

He said in a deposition that he admitted two of the charges were true and that the other four were generally true.

Amendment Set:

Rate Control Urged

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff Friday said the people should be allowed to determine whether they want "some protection against what may be unwarranted electric utility rate increases."

Carpenter is suggesting that the state assume regulatory power over all privately-owned utilities and publicly-owned wholesale electric districts.

That assignment would go to what is now the State Railway Commission, but what would be the new Public Service Commission if voters approve a proposed constitutional amendment contained in LB347.

Extend Powers

Carpenter has prepared an amendment to LB347 which would extend the agency's regulatory powers to include private utilities and wholesale electric districts.

That would give the state control over rates charged by the Nebraska Public Power District and Omaha Public Power District.

Carpenter's amendment, he noted, includes a proviso which directs the commission to charge the newly-regulated utilities and public power districts "fees which are adequate to support a staff of qualified persons" to regulate the agencies.

That provision, he said, should remove any objections from companies and utilities currently regulated by the Railway Commission which may fear that their costs would be increased.

State regulation over electric rates would "protect the people," Carpenter said, and assure consumers that their rates are "based on some reasonable formula of costs."

'Can Do What Want'

Now, he said, "the power districts can just do what they want to do and there need be no relationship to any formula of costs."

NPPD's recent rate increase, will result in "a boost in rates out here of 19%," Carpenter said by telephone from Scottsbluff. "And the people have no recourse."

Carpenter first raised his plan to regulate electric rates during floor debate earlier in the week on his proposed resolution to direct the state auditor and the attorney general to intervene in a pending dispute over OPPD's contractor costs for its nuclear power plant now under construction near Ft. Calhoun.

Sen. J. James Waldron of Callaway also went on record in favor of a regulatory utilities commission at that time.

"Nebraska needs a regulatory commission to set rates and decide on bond financing," Waldron said. "Until we get that, we will continue to have chaos."

NPPD Rate Hike Given Approval By Government

Columbus (UPI) — The Internal Revenue Service has approved a recent rate increase by the Nebraska Public Power District, Assistant NPPD General Manager D. E. Schaufelberger told the board of directors meeting here Friday.

He said the IRS has advised NPPD its recent increase complies with the applicable federal government regulations.

Several cities served by NPPD had inquired to the IRS concerning the rate hike.

Schaufelberger said on Nov. 30, 1971, in accordance with the federal government's Price Commission regulations, NPPD filed the required information regarding the rates to become effective the first of this year.

Stocks Decline Slightly

New York (AP) — Stock market prices dipped slightly Friday after trimming a moderate early loss. Trading was active.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials closed off 2.86 at 907.44. At one point during the session it was off nearly six points.

Institutional activity accounted for much of the activity, analysts said, and the number of blocks of 100,000 shares or more changing hands was higher than usual.

Robert Stovall, research director of Reynolds Co., said "the institutions think the market is going higher, and take advantage of a any downturn to move in."

He said this accounted for the late-session upswing.

In the news background, several major New York banks trimmed their prime lending rates to 4 1/2%, matching the 1/4% cut by some other large banks several days earlier.

The government reported that the cost of living index rose 0.4% in December but that the inflation record for the entire year was the best in four years.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange totaled 1.881 million shares, compared with Thursday's 2.021 million shares.

Of the New York Stock Exchange volume, 1,300 common stocks fell 0.11 to 57.39.

Of the 1,750 issues traded on the Big Board, 833 advanced, and 830 declined. There were 40 new highs for the year, and 480 declines.

The Associated Press 60-stock average fell 1.4 to 331.3, with industrials off 1.3, utilities down 1.4, and 1.3.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 0.2 to 102.63.

There were 146 blocks of 10,000 shares or more traded on the Big Board, compared with a revised total of 134 Thursday.

Allegany Power was most active on the Big Board, with 224,000 shares of 350,000 shares traded at 22 1/4, off 1/4.

On the American Stock Exchange, the price-change index rose 0.03 to 26.71, of the 1,193 issues traded, 423 advanced, and 480 declined. Volume totaled 4.74 million shares, compared with 5.1 million on Thursday.

Corporate bonds were mixed, and governments sagged.

Hog Prices Are Higher At Omaha

Omaha, Neb. (AP) — Hog prices were unevenly higher in Omaha Friday in very active trading.

Butchers under 250 lbs sold 50 cents to $1 higher, heavier weights and sows were strong to 50 cents higher. Bulk 200-240 lb butchers sold 26.75-27.50, with the top the highest price since March 1970.

Weights 240-270 lbs sold 25.25-27.25, with heavier weights scarce.

Sows 325-600 lb sold 21.00-23.25.

Fed cattle receipts consisted of two loads choice to prime heifers which sold fully steady at 21.00-36.00.

Bulk of the run was cows, with trading fairly active and prices strong to 25 cents higher under continued good demand.

A few bulls sold steady.

Beef cows brought 22.00-23.50, a few utility dairymen sold to 24.00. Canner and cutter went at 19.00-22.00, with cutter and low utility at 22.25-22.75.

Georgia Tech Names Fulcher, Christiansen Gets Stanford Nod

By Associated Press

Three college head football coaches were named Friday with Jack Christiansen getting the nod at Stanford, Bill Fulcher at Georgia Tech and Mike White at California.

Iowa State's Johnny Majors was rumored to be the top choice for the Georgia Tech job but only hours before Fulcher was named, Majors announced in Ames that he asked to have his name withdrawn from consideration for the position.

"I still have a goal to be achieved at Iowa State-winning the Big Eight title," said Majors.

The reports of Majors' possible acceptance of the job were strengthened Thursday when ISU athletic director Lou McCullough said: "If Majors is offered the Tech job, I believe he'll take it."

Majors wouldn't comment on the situation until Friday morning when he announced he was withdrawing. But he did admit he had been to Atlanta this week to be interviewed for the position.

"I want to concentrate all my energies on our plans for recruiting and for the 1972 season," Majors said.

"I was flattered that I was considered for the Georgia Tech coaching vacancy but I am most happy at Iowa State. All I want to do is to get to work with my staff in preparing for spring practice and our recruiting program."

Majors and the Cyclones made an 8-3 record last fall and Majors was named Big Eight Coach of the Year.

Fulcher, an Augusta native and a 1957 Georgia Tech graduate, will succeed Bud Carson, who was fired earlier this month after posting a five-year, 27-27 record.

The 38-year-old Fulcher, who played on three Tech bowl teams, is only the fifth head coach in the school's 68-year history.

He is a former pro linebacker in his first year as head football coach at the University of Tampa.

He was recommended for the job by Bobby Dodd, Teach athletic director. "I must have talked to over 500 people . . . this past week before I concluded that Bill was just the right person to handle the future of Georgia Tech football," said Dodd in a statement.

"This is the fulfillment of a life's dream," said Fulcher. "I've been dreaming of this day ever since I arrived at Georgia Tech in 1952 as a skinny guard."

Fulcher, who entered the school without an athletic scholarship, was hired without a contract, as is the custom at Georgia Tech. "I wanted it that way and so did coach Dodd," he said.

Fulcher, who spent three seasons with the Washington Redskins before embarking upon a high school and college coaching career, posted a 6-5 record at Tampa.

He served two coaching stints at Georgia Tech—in 1963 and 1966—and moved to the University of Florida in 1970 as offensive line coach.

Christiansen, 43, the defensive back coach at Stanford, is a former head coach of the San Francisco 49ers of the National Football League and starred as a player for the Detroit Lions of the NFL from 1951 to 1958.

The announcement followed a statement by Mike White, Stanford assistant coach, that he had rejected an offer to become head coach.

Track coach Dave Maggard became the University of California's new athletic director and immediately named White as the Bears' head football coach.

The appointment of Maggard and White, both in their 30s, to the key jobs in the troubled Cal athletic program ended a hectic period of coaching musical chairs at Cal and Stanford.

Northeast Overthrows Norfolk

Norfolk—Lincoln Northeast, capitalizing on a Norfolk dry spell in the third quarter, moved to a 5-2 record with a 50-42 basketball win here Friday night.

The Rockets trailed 20-18 at halftime, but held Norfolk to just four points in the third quarter to hold a 32-24 lead going into the final period. The Panthers went for a six-minute stretch midway through the third quarter without scoring.

Tom Westover, who tied for scoring honors with sophomore Terry Novak with 16 points, scored 10 points in the Rockets' big third quarter. Novak scored 11 points in the second half.

The Rockets, rated eighth, held a 10-point lead through most of the final period but had their lead cut to 46-40 with 40 seconds remaining. That's the closest the Panthers could come, however.

Norfolk, now 5-6, was led in scoring by Randy Benish with 13 points.

Northeast meets Pius X at Pershing Auditorium Saturday at 8 p.m.

Plainsmen Entertain Hastings

Three things about the Hastings College basketball team worry Nebraska Wesleyan coach Irv Peterson — speed, quickness and depth.

"Hastings has an all-around ball team and we'll have to play almost a perfect game to win," Peterson said. Peterson's Plainsmen host the Broncos Saturday night at Ira J. Taylor Gym in a Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference game starting at 7:30.

Hastings, 1-0 in the NIAC after beating Doane at home, will open conference play for NWU.

"Hastings has been able to adjust to just about any kind of game although they like to run," Peterson said. "The title game of the conference's pre-season tournament in Crete this season is a good example."

"Doane forced Hastings to slow down and play ball control but Hastings still won," he explained.

Peterson expects his team to outbattle the Broncos on the boards but whether the Plainsmen can out run Hastings is a different matter. "I don't know how the team will do but we'll try our best," said Peterson.

The Broncos will start all seniors, led by all-conference and all-state guard Jim White with four players on the bench who might be starting in other years.

NWU's balanced scoring may present a problem for the Broncos with all five Plainsmen starters averaging in double figures. But on the other hand Hastings will also present a balanced scoring attack with four starters in double figures.

The difference in the game may be defense, a point which has proven to be a weak one for Wesleyan at times this season.

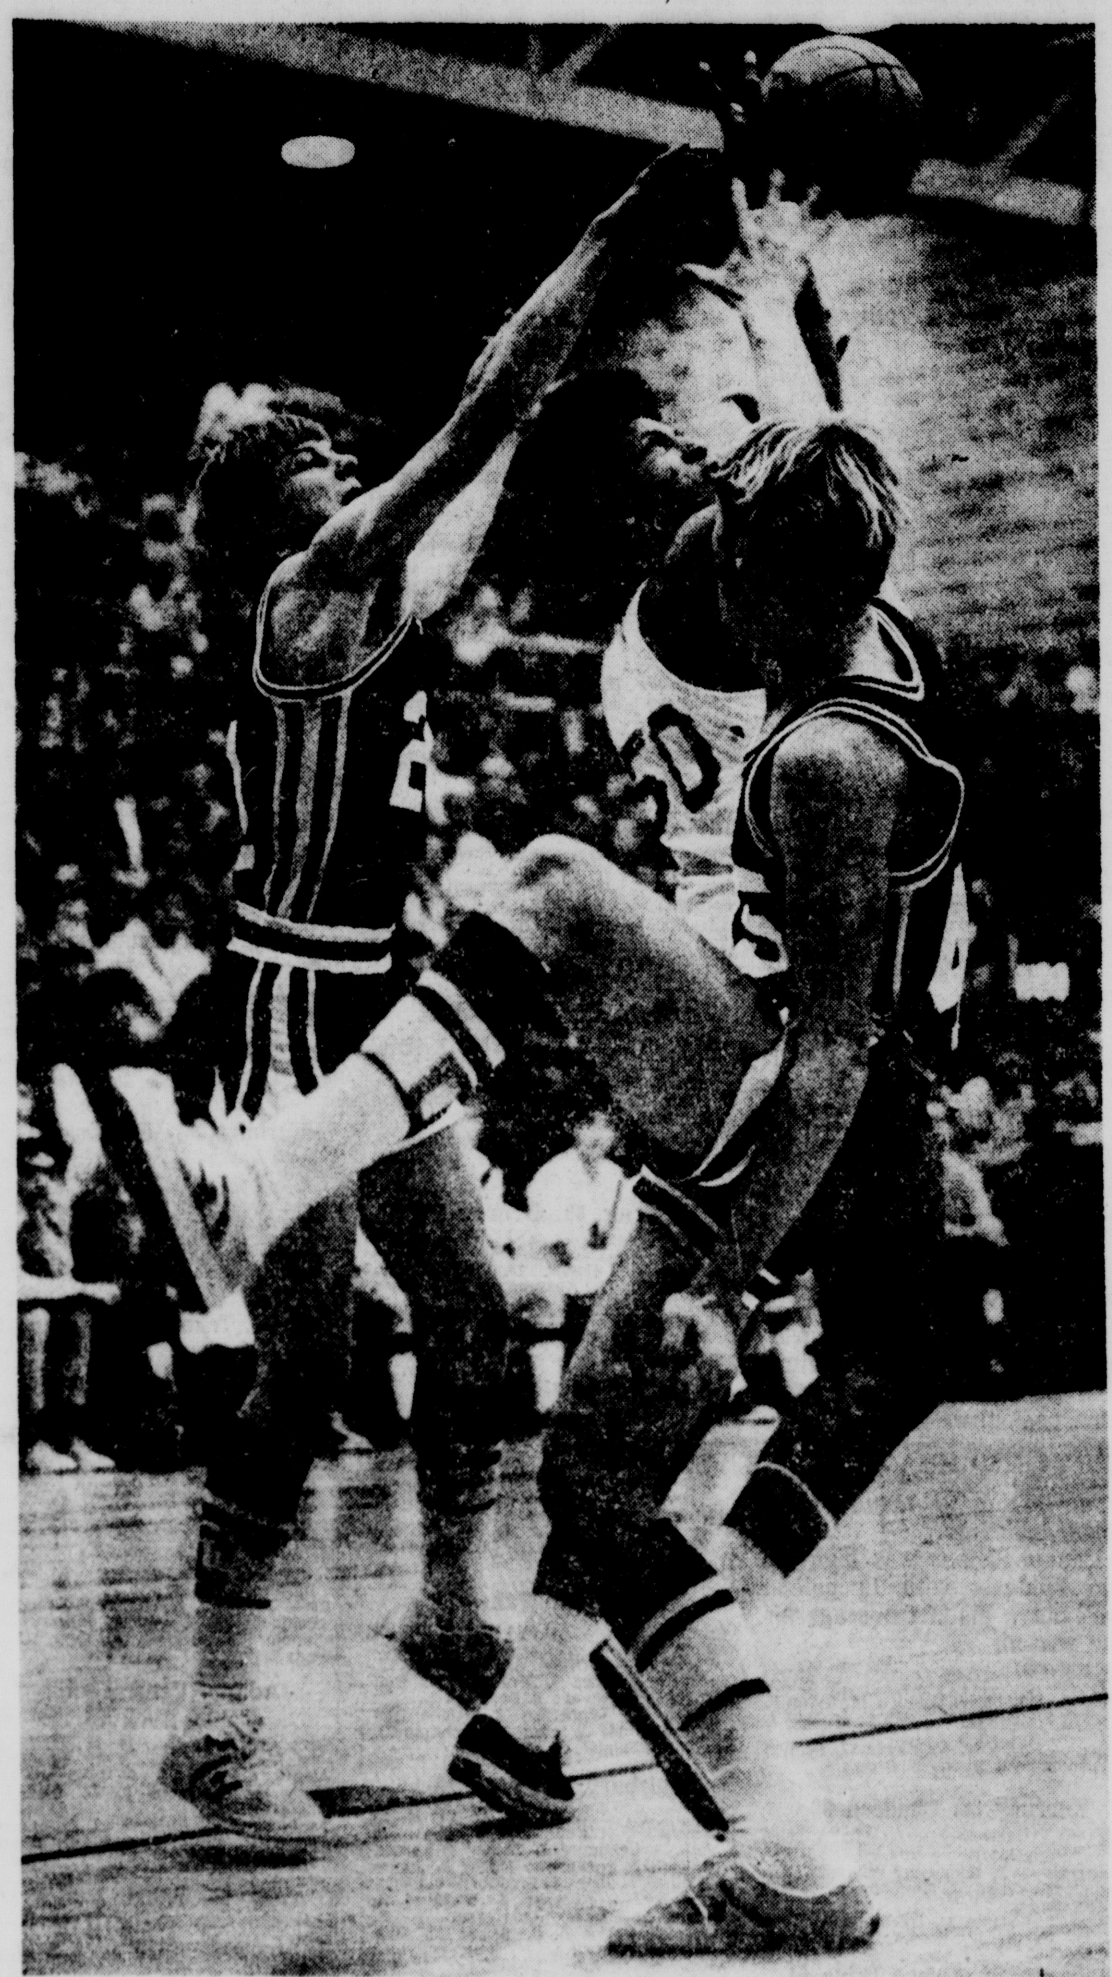

Other NIAC games this weekend has Doane at Midland and Dana invading Concordia.

NU Ranks Nationally In Two Departments

New York — Nebraska's basketball team ranks 13th nationally in scoring defense and seventh in field goal accuracy, according to figures released Friday by National Collegiate Sports Services.

The Huskers are giving up only 65.5 points per game and are hitting at a percentage of .510 in field goals.

UNO Leads Relay Times

Kansas City, Mo. (P) — The University of Nebraska at Omaha turned in the best times in the mile and two-mile relay preliminaries here Friday night at the NAIA indoor track meet.

The Mavericks were timed in 3:23.4 in the mile relay and 7:54.7 in the two-mile. UNO distance runner Pat Rinn qualified in the two-mile run giving the Omaha team the best showing of any Nebraska school.

Doane qualified its mile relay two individuals team. The Tigers' Larry Engleman qualified in the 60-yard high hurdles and teammate John Green qualified in the 880.

26 counters. Ball hit 20 points and Scott Copple rounded out the two-digit scorers with 12.

Bob Trout topped McCook scorers with 22. Gale Loop and Chip Smith also hit double figures with 13 and 10 tallies, respectively.

Ron Phillips, one of McCook's top scorers, left the game via the foul route with 7:34 remaining and finished with only 12 points.

Lincoln East's record now stands at 6-1. McCook falls to 2-9 after the fifth loss to a rated team.

Then Ya Tung, the first Chinese women's basketball team to tour this country, will play in Mexico, Panama, Costa Rica and possibly Brazil before returning home.

The Patriettes may find the Chinese harder to beat a second time for two reasons. The first is five players who were sick and didn't play on Thursday against ten wins, 63-44, in Wahoo Thursday night on the Chinese's tour of the country.

The other loss was administered by a Nashville, Tenn., team but Ya Tung bounced back to beat the same club in two more games.

The JFK girls will play Ya Tung in a second game Saturday night in Council Bluffs, Iowa, at St. Albert's Gym. After that the Asian team will travel most impressive second half scorer, getting 12 of his 17 points after intermission, including eight in the last quarter.

The Discoverers, who hit only 10 of their 28 free throws, also shot only 35 per cent from the field by hitting 21 of their 60 attempts.

The Links connected on 51 per cent of their field goal tries (26-51). A late flurry of fourth quarter turnovers after the game had already been decided gave Lincoln High 17 turnovers. Columbus committed 23.

The Links, who dropped out of Virgil Parker's top ten ratings after losses to Lincoln Northeast and at Omaha Central last weekend, host Boys Town next weekend.

Hastings is idle until a Big Ten Conference game at Fremont next Friday night.

—FOURTH-QUARTER SURGE— Hastings Topples Southeast, 83-71

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

An early fourth-quarter surge by Hastings sparked the Tigers to an 83-71 Trans-Nebraska Conference basketball victory over Lincoln Southeast at East High Friday night.

Carrying a precarious 60-58 lead into the final stanza, the Tigers roared to a 10-2 margin and assumed an invincible 70-60 cushion with just over four minutes remaining that ended speculation as to the outcome.

The triumph boosted coach Jim Smith's Tigers to a 7-3 record while the defeat left coach Wally McNaught's Knights with a 3-6 slate.

While Southeast was led by Larry Vasholz, a 6-1 senior forward, with 30 points, the Tigers had five scorers hit double figures — Greg Reiner (22), Ray Cole (18), Gary Scott (17) and Scott Stickels and Del Hemje (each with 10).

Following a see-saw first quarter that saw the visitors snare a slim 21-20 advantage, the Tigers began their surge after trailing 32-29 with 4:45 remaining before halftime.

A short turn-around basket by Scott and three straight buckets by Reiner put Hastings in front to stay at 37-32 with 4:02 left.

Reiner's flurry followed a 10-minute interruption while Knight officials and doctors tended to SE's Steve McManaman, who was injured while scoring a layup with 4:55 left in the second period.

McNaught said the 6-3 junior center suffered a badly-bruised back and hip. McManaman returned after the contest to the Knight locker room following x-rays at a Lincoln hospital.

Although Southeast came within a single basket in five occasions in the third quarter, each time the Tigers sunk baskets to lead by four. At one stretch (53-47 with six minutes left) the Tigers led by six points.

The spunky Knights kept rallying and with 1:48 left in the fourth quarter, a basket by

Bob Gets Legislature To Accede

By Associated Press

Acceding to a request by Nebraska football coach Bob Devaney, Nebraska legislators Friday canceled a planned meeting at the University of Nebraska Coliseum to honor Devaney and his 1971 national championship team.

Rather, Devaney suggested, senators should put their efforts into working for construction of the proposed NU fieldhouse to be built with part of an increase in the state cigarette tax.

The legislature voted 34-0 to cancel the meeting.

In passing the resolution Wednesday setting up the meeting, senators had asked for a presentation Devaney would remember the rest of his life.

Construction of the fieldhouse "Would certainly be a presentation that I would treasure for the rest of my life," wrote Devaney in a letter to senators and Gov. J. J. Exon.

Devaney has announced he will retire after the 1972 season as head coach but will remain as athletic director.

"Maybe after another season, or when I retire completely from athletics at the University of Nebraska, the situation will be such that I'll need an expression of your good intentions," Devaney wrote.

"Right now, however, we've all got a lot of things to do that are more important to the State of Nebraska and U of N athletic program than showing appreciation for Bob Devaney."

Among those other things, he said, are recruiting, clinics and meetings.

Many team members are not now on campus and coaches are scattered across the country, Devaney explained, and "it would be most difficult to find a time in these busy schedules to bring all of the people to Lincoln."

The resolution had called for the meeting to "Indicate acceptance of this man (Devaney) as the No. 1 citizen."

"Now that I have made my decision to remain as head coach for another year, I personally feel that a public meeting to do the things set forth in the resolution would not be the best use of time," Devaney concluded.

Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha, a past critic of the Nebraska football program, rose to applaud Devaney's action and said "For the first time, I give him 100 per cent backing on action he has taken."

Here's the population explosion in personal terms. To the proud parents, it's their first child—and they love her! But to the statisticians, who deal only with cold facts, she's just one more person on an already crowded earth.

What a dilemma! We want children, but we want them to face a secure future. When almost no one is optimistic about the present, how can anyone look forward to the future?

Other generations have faced momentous problems, too. Yet, with God's help, they surmounted them.

And God—if we turn to His Church—will do the same for us!

Decision Voiding Election Of Boone County School Committee Is Reversed

By The Associated Press
The Nebraska Supreme Court Friday reversed a Boone County District Court decision and ruled valid the 1969 election of the Boone County Committee for the Reorganization of School Districts.

However, the high court voided the election of two of the committee members and ruled that the committee had wrongly been composed of 11, rather than the proper 10, members.

In reversing the district court decision, the high court, in an opinion by Judge Harry Spencer, said the committee "is not a governing body" of any of the units or agencies under related statutes and thus does not have to comply with laws requiring public notification of intent to meet.

The district court had voided the election because the publication requirement had not been followed but the high court said the committee, chosen by county school officials, is not a governing body under the scope of the statute.

However, the high court said the committee was improperly made up in that the statute calls for a committee of not more than 10 members, including the county superintendent who shall be a non-voting member.

At a meeting Dec. 22, 1969, 10 members were chosen who, with the superintendent, made an 11-man committee and the high court said the committee was too large.

The Supreme Court also ordered the district court to void the election of Don Skillstad and Dick Michaels, two of the seven board members chosen to represent Class I districts.

In counties such as Boone where Class I districts prevail, the high court said, statute provides that simple majority of elective members be from Class I districts, or five members.

Skillstad and Michaels received the lowest vote totals of the seven Class I representatives chosen.

In other decisions Friday, the court:

Affirmed the Lancaster County District Court conviction of Leo Clinton on a drunk driving charge and upheld the sentence given Clinton.

Dismissed an appeal from Richardson County District Court and directed the lower court to dismiss the complaint against the defendant, Melvin Campbell, who died last year.

Reversed a Douglas County District Court ruling in favor of the city of Omaha in a suit brought by George Rose Solding & Grading Company, Inc. The court ordered a new trial. Rose charged the city had pumped sewage onto his property and asked damages.

Affirmed the Scotts Bluff County District Court decision in a divorce action between Sidney and Rachel Keenan, ruling that Keenan may withhold $1,500 in alimony until his ex-wife returns some personal property to him.

Upheld the Madison County District Court conviction of Edwin O'Brien on a charge of concealing a motorcycle with knowledge it had been stolen.

Affirmed the Adams County District Court conviction of Herman Hoffmeyer on a charge of breaking and entering a dwelling.

Agreed with the Lancaster County District Court in turning down a habeas corpus writ request from Penal Complex inmate Vernon Middlebrook.

Refused to set aside the three to 10-year prison term meted out by the Douglas County District Court to Decabooter Williams after a robbery conviction.

Upheld the Saunders County District Court in pair of Workmen's Compensation Court-related cases. Parhandle Construction Co. was found to be liable for Workmen's Compensation for Charles Warren Jr. while Mid-America Pipeline Co. was held not liable for Workmen's Compensation for Warren. The cases stemmed from a December, 1968 gas explosion near Yutan in which Warren and another man were killed.

Chambers Says UNO Plans To Fire Black Studies Head

Saturday, January 22, 1972 The Lincoln Star 13

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha Friday protested what he said is a University of Nebraska at Omaha (UNO) administrative decision not to renew the contract of Dr. Milton White, director of the Black Studies Department.

In brief remarks to the Legislature, Chambers said he would like to meet with interested senators to "present to you the case for the Black Studies Department and its significance to us."

Chambers also wrote NU President D. B. Varner asking him to "head this explosive collision off."

Vows 'Cripple' Attempt

Chambers told Varner he is "prepared to do everything in my power to cripple the university if the university continues being a source of such agony and distress for the black community."

A decision not to renew White's contract "reawakens all the bitterness in this community which were generated when the Omaha Public Schools spat in the face of the black community by unjustifiably firing my brother, Eddie Chambers, from his counselor position at Tech Junior High," Chambers wrote.

"In both cases, the men were deeply rooted in the black community; each of them provided a positive image to the youth and a positive influence toward the solution of our identity crisis."

Wary of Confrontation

Chambers told Varner he is "wary of continually being confronted with a situation wherein a strong black man is threatened by insecure whites who object to us standing and demanding rather than kneeling and begging."

"Dr. White is not a beggar, nor am I."

At issue is "the very essence of the value of the university to the black community and whether white men will arbitrarily determine that no black man can hold a position with the university unless he conforms to the old notion of a plantation hand," Chambers wrote.

"Must Draw A Line"

"Black men must draw a line beyond which we will not be pushed. I have reached that line."

In his remarks to the Legislature, Chambers said the UNO administration apparently "decided Dr. White is too controversial."

But White is "soft-spoken, logical, willing to discuss all matters at length and hear all sides," he said.

"If he is too controversial, then the university and all its stands for can go straight to hell."

Chambers said black children are "still suffering mental death at the hands of the University of Nebraska."

They are "used" as football players, but on other matters they are "included out," along with Chicanos and native Americans, he declared.

Chambers presented his remarks in praising Coach Bob Devaney's request to the Legislature to forego its planned public meeting to honor the coach, his staff and the NU football team.

"I give him 100% on the action he's taken," Chambers said. It showed "good judgment."

Devaney, he said, seems to have "given permission to the state to grow up once again . . . and not act like little children living over a football game time and time again."

Military Cut Is Called For By Peterson

Democratic senatorial candidate Wallace Peterson Friday said military outlays over the next four years should be "pared back to the pre-Vietnam levels (of) about $50 billion per year."

"That can be accomplished"

"without impairment to our essential nuclear deterrent," he said in the text of a speech before a student audience at North Platte Junior College released to newsmen in Lincoln.

"The civilian leadership must insist that our military leadership stop preparing to fight World War II all over again at a time when the cost of obsolete weapons has escalated many times over."

(The current Department of Defense budget is about $80 billion.)

"As we finally extricate ourselves from the morass in Vietnam, we must at the same time end the military domination of our national life," Peterson said.

The emphasis on military expenditures has resulted in 'an excessive brain drain' which has starved the civilian economy of badly needed scientific and technical talent," he said.

Another consequence has been "drastic neglect of needed social investments in our great cities, in mass transportation, and in education, not to mention the preservation and repair of our mangled environment," he declared.

"And finally there is the slow and insidious damage our values and institutions sustain by inflation," fed by military spending and war.

Peterson said the U.S. should also end the military draft.

"I find it bitterly ironic that Senator Curtis now says he is opposed to the draft, yet both last September and last June when he had a chance to make his views felt in a way that really counted, he voted to continue this system," Peterson said.

NU Officials Deny Charge

University of Nebraska officials denied Friday that the chairman of the UN-O's black studies department will be fired, and Chairman Milton White agrees that they are "technically correct."

"But there is a movement afoot in officialdom to somehow cancel my presence" at the Omaha school, White said.

University of Nebraska at Omaha Chancellor Dr. J. V. Blackwell said the report was not true "and I think Milton White will deny it, too."

White said that "nothing formal" has happened but that some university officials "are constantly reminding me that my contract is going to be reviewed."

not one of the officials threatening him and that the denial was "technically correct."

"But I know that there are some who are disheartened by my tactics, who think I might be indoctrinating young people," he added. He said he was grateful for Chambers' remarks.

"I think he was translating some of these things into real terms," White said. "It was an expression of justice and a will to see another person treated fairly."

White is in his second semester at the Omaha school. He came to the university from the University of California at Santa Barbara.

Jury Number Requirement
Is Lowered

Omaha — The U.S.
District Court for Nebraska has revised its rules to require six-member juries instead of 11-member juries in all civil cases, effective March 1.

Twenty-four federal districts now have adopted such a rule, according to William J. Riedmann, president of the Defense Counsel Association.

Some of the federal districts making the change provide for six-member juries in certain civil cases, while others, like Nebraska's, make the provision for all civil cases.

Riedmann said his association favors retention of the jury system in civil cases but has no opposition to reducing the number of jurors from 12 to six.

Chinese Nationalists Said Stoic

By SAM THORSON
Star Staff Writer
Wahoo —The Nationalist Chinese People are "very stoic, calm and composed" about their country's expulsion from the United Nations, a top Taiwan diplomat said here Friday night.
Minister S. K. Hu, special assistant to the Taiwan ambassador to the United States, was a featured speaker at a banquet given at John F. Kennedy College in honor of Hu and the Ya Tung Nationalist Chinese Women's Basketball Team.

The basketball team played a J.F.K. women's team Thursday night, losing 64-43.
Hu, currently the No. 2 man in Taiwan's Washington embassy, has been a general in the Chinese air force, Taiwan minister of defense, chief of military information, head of Taiwan's mission in the U.S., and interpreter for Chiang Kai-Shek, at various stages in his military and diplomatic career.

"Too Much To Do"
The Nationalist Chinese have "too many things to do that are not to be thrown away casually" to "cry in the streets" over the loss of their UN seat, Hu said.
Taiwan's essential relationship with the U.S. will not be changed by specific administrative policies, Hu said, adding that "it is the American people who will really choose the course of action."

Nationalist China will remain allied with the U.S. as a vital link in the "western Pacific defense perimeter," Hu said, and domestically will continue to safeguard "the traditional Chinese civilization and way of life."
The Communists, he said, "have openly declared the eradication of the old civilization."
"Should Learn"
Looking to the future of the U.S.-Red China relationship, Hu suggested that Red Chinese Prime Minister Chou En-Lai should learn from the experiences of his two predecessors as Mao Tse-tung's second-hand man. Chao is anxious to be successful with President Nixon when he visits China, Hu said, but the Red Chinese foreign minister should recall that both Liu Shao-Chi and Lin Biao were "probably" purged by Mao for becoming too influential.

In a flurry of tongue-in-check protocol, Hu was presented with an admiralship in the Nebraska Navy, an honorary Nebraska citizenship, and a piece of polished Nebraska blue agate by Lt. Gov. Frank Marsh, and a one-day honorary mayorship of Wahoo by Mayor Jack Swanson.
In his first and only official action as honorary mayor, the visiting diplomat declared all parking tickets null and void.

Thompson Criticizes Bill Allowing City Control Of Housing Authority

A proposed legislative bill which would allow city government to assume the full operations and responsibilities of the Lincoln Housing Authority has drawn criticism from Authority chairman Carroll Thompson.

The measure, LB1139, would allow the presently autonomous Housing Authority to become an arm of the city government, either by forming a new city department on housing or by being placed under an existing department.

The bill would provide the city with the power to levy taxes for housing projects and the right to issue general obligation bonds for the same purpose.

"Encumbers' Process"
Thompson said Friday that passage of the bill as written would "encumber the process of providing low income housing, rather than expediting it."

He said that before the power is granted to the city to levy local funds for housing programs, an election of the voters should be held.

"There has been no indication that I know of by the voters that they wish to have added property or sales taxes for the purpose of providing low income housing," Thompson added.

Taxes Not Needed
He said he feels that the major share of the low income housing need in Lincoln can be met without local tax funds by pursuing an aggressive program.

Thompson said he did not feel that the present city housing department has demonstrated the ability to carry forward successfully a program in housing.

"On the other hand the Lincoln Housing Authority has demonstrated a good capability to initiate, operate and carry on in a successful manner such housing programs," he stated.

No Guarantee
In addition, he argued that there is no guarantee that by lumping all activities into one office that either efficiency or performance are automatically improved.

The greatest strength of the Housing Authority has been that "We have had some very dedicated people who have served for long periods of time, intensively working on housing programs," he said.

Thompson added that there was no certainty that a similar commission of volunteer people would be appointed to assist in the policy-making functions of the city department, since such a citizen group is not called for in the bill.

No Approval Needed
However, Thompson said he did strongly support the accountability section of the measure which would require that members of the Housing Authority be appointed by the mayor, with City Council approval. Currently, no Council approval is needed.

Thompson said that another drawback of the proposed bill is that more legislation would be needed before the bill's implementation.
He also argued that that passage of the bill would falsely raise the hopes of low income people.

He said "The bill would be holding out a promise of help, when, in fact, the Council may not be in favor of budgeting tax money for housing at that time."

Brucellosis Status Lost; Sale Of Cattle Hindered

Nebraska has lost its status as a Modified Brucellosis state because Boone County cattlemen failed to meet the requirements set up by the U.S. Department of Agriculture Animal Health Service.

This means that no cattle in Boone County can be sold except for slaughter without first having been tested for brucellosis.

Four other counties, Blaine, Frontier, Greeley and Valley, are in danger of losing their status as well.

Unauthorized sale of Boone County cattle to any of Nebraska's other counties could jeopardize the status of those counties as well, according to officials of Nebraska's Bureau of Animal Industry.

Under the regulations set up by the USDA 15% of the cattle in a county must be tested in a three-year period.

Usually this is done through the cattle sold in sale barns and livestock auction markets.

Boone county ranchers and farmers who have cattle to sell must either sell them for slaughter or present proof that their cattle are adequately tested.

The State Department of Agriculture is notifying each known livestock producer in Boone county of his status. If he can present evidence of an adequate testing program he can be declared a qualified herd owner which makes it possible to sell cattle for breeding or feeding purposes.

Dr. Ivan Hember, assistant state veterinarian, expressed the fear that other counties will be in trouble if the cattlemen don't pursue an adequate testing program.

Hember said that farmers living outside of Boone county can presently sell livestock but he advises that the cattle should be tested.

Welfare Hike For Students Is Supported

A representative of the State Welfare Advisory Board Friday urged support for a proposal which would provide an additional welfare allowance to families with children in junior or senior high school.

The bill, Lincoln Sen. Harold Simpson's LB1215, is intended to help cover such costs as locker fees, school lunches or transportation to and from school.

The chairman of the board's public information subcommittee, Patrick Chaulk, also backed a bill introduced by Omaha Sen. David Stahmer, LB1291, which would prohibit utilities from shutting off service during the winter to homes where there are aged, sick, disabled or children present.

Chaulk said the board went on record against two other bills. They were LB1218, raising lobbyists fees by $20 annually, and LB772, authorizing advisory committees to county welfare boards.

Committee To Meet

Nebraska's Department of Economic Development Advisory Committee has scheduled a meeting for 12:00 noon Monday, Jan. 24 at the Lincoln Hotel in Lincoln.

The meeting is being called by Bennett S. Martin, chairman of the committee. According to Stan Matzke, director of the Department of Economic Development, discussion will include budget matters and projected activities for the Department in 1972.

Special sound measurements will be taken to determine if the ping is really louder or just a belief on the part of the driver.

Experts conducting the tests warned reporters that the data is very preliminary but they did term it optimistic.

Continued testing for a period of at least a year will be needed to determine the value of the fuel. Emission tests will be included to measure the amount of pollution experienced with the new fuel.

The tests are being run with different drivers and under a variety of climatic conditions, Dual said.

Pair Charged In Burglary Of Post Office

Council Bluffs, Iowa — A young couple appeared before U.S. Magistrate Richard Peterson here Friday on charges stemming from the theft earlier in the week of 25 blank postal money orders from a post office at Macedonia, Iowa.

Michael Lloyd Murphy, 21, of Iowa City and Jean L. Ralston, 22, of Beatrice, Neb., were arrested by Iowa highway patrolmen and Montgomery County authorities at a farmhouse near Stanton, Iowa earlier in the day.

Both parties were jailed at Council Bluffs in lieu of $5,000 bond each after their appearance before Peterson.

Murphy is charged with burglary of a post office and Miss Ralston is charged with possession of stolen money orders. Both are federal offenses.

A preliminary hearing is set Feb. 4 at Council Bluffs.

Postal authorities noticed that the Macedonia post office had been burglarized and 25 blank postal money orders were missing Wednesday morning. The burglars apparently got into the office through a basement window.

Cattle Number On Feed Rises In December

The number of cattle on feed in Nebraska increased by about one per cent during December, to 1,550,000 head, according to the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics.

The total is about 9% up from the cattle on feed as of Jan. 1, 1971, the division noted.

Placements during the October to December period increased 10% during the three months.
The division said Nebraska feeders plan to market 1,054,000 head during the next three months. That would be about 7% more than were marketed over the same period last year.

Audit Reports Being Awaited From 135 Sites

More than a hundred Nebraska cities and villages have yet to file their required audit reports with the state, State Auditor Ray A. C. Johnson reported Friday.

State law requires that all incorporated cities and villages file and audit report for the fiscal year, and Johnson said that reports from the fiscal year which ended July 31 last year are due in his office on or before Jan. 31 this year.

He said that out of the 534 cities and villages required to file, 135 have not as yet submitted a report.

DID YOU KNOW THIS? IT'S A FACT:

Ladybugs do not die at the end of the season like so many other insects, but hibernate for the winter.

Florida's common octopus can give a troublesome sting bite that causes inflammation and numbness.

Canadian hunters bagged 701 caribou during the 1971 hunting season.

Pygmyes averaging 4 1/2 feet tall range the equatorial rain forests of Central Africa and hunt with poison-tipped arrows.

Snakes' eyes are covered by hard, transparent, plastic-like caps so they can burrow without hurting their eyes. They have no eyelids.

The octopus is a shy creature and would rather run than fight.

Here is a practical little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is six or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add three. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures gives you.

Louis Patrick Cooper, of 321 So. 18th, coordinator of human rights for the Lincoln Action Program, was arrested at his home Friday night on a felony warrant in connection with the alleged sale of narcotics, Lincoln Police Inspector Robert Sawdon said.

Sawdon said six narcotics officers of the Lincoln Police Dept. and two officers of the Nebraska State Patrol participated in the raid after a month-long investigation.

Cooper allegedly sold a quantity of LSD to an undercover agent on Tuesday, Jan. 18, according to police.

Signed After 5 p.m.
Deputy Lancaster County Attorney Robert Gibson told The Star that Judge Ralph Slocum signed the warrant shortly after 5 p.m. Friday.

In a press conference earlier Friday, Cooper had said he recently talked with Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee's civil rights subcommittee and was promised a federal investigation into Lincoln's civil rights controversy. (See Story on Page 7.)

Two men were arrested with Cooper and booked on charges of being present where an illicit narcotic was being used, Sawdon said. He said one of the men, 21, gave a Lincoln address and the other, 21, gave a Crete address.

They were not named in the arrest warrant for alleged narcotic sale, Sawdon said.

Arraignment Monday
Cooper is expected to be arraigned on the charge Monday at 11 a.m. in Lancaster County District Court, Sawdon said.

According to Sawdon, narcotics officers also were "equipped with a search warrant for 321 So. 18th to search for illicit drugs and controlled substances."

Police reported, "Additional drugs and drug-related paraphernalia were seized in the house which may result in the filing of other charges."

2 Men Killed In Separate Accidents

By United Press International
Two separate traffic accidents on Nebraska highways Friday left two persons dead and three others injured.

The Nebraska State Patrol identified the victims as Arthur Tignor, 45, Sulfur Springs, Texas, and Daniel Grant, 55, of Macy.

The patrol said Tignor was killed when the southbound semi-trailer truck he was driving swerved into a ditch off Nebraska 281 nearly five miles north of Red Cloud.

The patrol said the truck then slammed into a farm yard, caught fire and burned.

Grant was killed in a two-car crash just southwest of Walthill on a Thurston County road. The patrol said the northbound car driven by Grant collided head-on with an oncoming car driven by Lawrence Fahrenholz, 54, Walthill.

The patrol said Fahrenholz, and his son, Rick, 13, a passenger in the car, suffered minor injuries, with young Fahrenholz taken to Pender Hospital for treatment.

Neighbor Files Suit Requesting Restraint Of Cat

Louisville, Ky. (UPI) — Alvin Voit has filed suit against his neighbor, Albert Leake, asking a court to declare Leake's cat Wilard a common nuisance and to force Leake to restrain him.

Voit says Willard sleeps on top of his expensive Mercedes-Benz and tears up the soft roof with his claws.

DEMOS SAY NIXON NEGLECTFUL

—Youth in Action— Portuguese Is Required In Learning Experience

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

One Lincoln student with her work cut out for her during the next few weeks is a girl on her way to a year as a student in a new culture ... and within a new language.

She is 16-year-old Shela Shanks, who will be on her way to Brazil later this month to participate in the year-long "Americans abroad" program of the American Field Service (AFS).

And Shela, who says she's already started to study Portuguese "a bit," will have a full-blown necessity for a knowledge of that language before long — when she begins her studies in a Portuguese-language school in the Brazilian state of Bahia.

Cram Course Planned
Before then, however, she'll have had a week-long "cram" course in the language during a stopover in Rio de Janeiro, and then a month of practice with her host family in the coastal city of Salvador.

"The adjustment to different people, to the culture and learning the language" will be her three biggest goals immediately, Shela said this week as she prepared for her Jan. 31 departure to New York.

"Everything will be entirely new," she noted, including the weather — it's virtually summer all year long where she's headed.

In fact, she noted, there'll be a month left in her new friends' summer vacation when Shela arrives in February.

Word that she had been chosen for the trip abroad came early this month, and the message capped activities that had started with applications and interviews early in the fall.

Others Named

While Shela, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hughes Shanks of 2761 Randolph, is winging her way to Latin America, two other Lincoln lasses are on their way to the "land down under" as a part of AFS programs.

They are Southeast High student Nancy Fahlberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fahlberg, and East High student Pam Davidson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Davidson.

Nancy will spend a year in New Zealand; Pam in Australia.

"I know there will be a difference," said Shela of her outlook on the trip. Still, she noted, "People are basically the same" everywhere.

"You have to be able to accept that," she said.

Local Retail Dairy Products Dated By Variety Of Methods

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer
In a survey of several local dairies by The Star it was learned that the dairy industry has not been unaffected by the open-dating issue.

A variety of methods — from open-dating (Roberts and Fairmont) to no dating at all (Goodrich) — are being employed by the dairies. Beatrice Foods (Meadowgold), which uses six imprinted numbers on the top of their milk cartons, declined to reveal their code system.

In addition to milk, the freshness dating of cottage cheese was also surveyed.

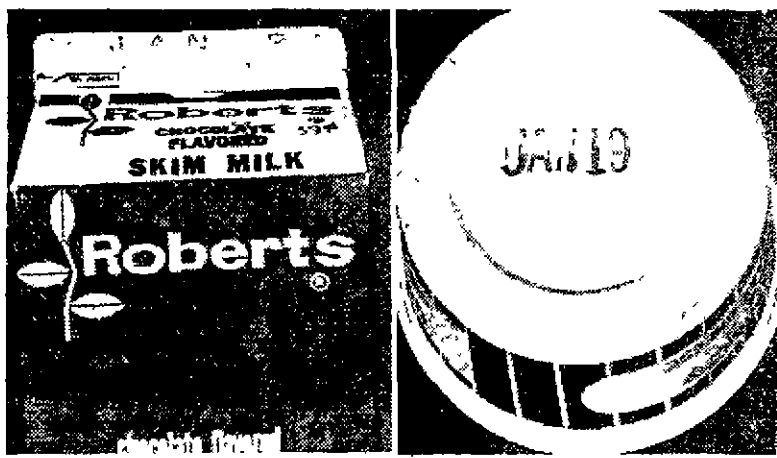

Roberts Dairy branch manager Larry Liebers reported that his company uses a system of open-dating on milk. He explained that the date printed in black ink at the top of a milk carton is a "pull date" or the last day the milk will remain on the shelf for sale. This code is based on a nine-day shelf life for milk in the store.

Easier To Control
Liebers added that open-dating makes it easier to control rotation in a store to "assure that the consumer gets the freshest product." He said that Roberts salesmen check the stores daily to rotate the milk and to remove any cartons that are pull-dated for that day.

There is no reason for milk to go bad, said Liebers, except for temperature. He suggested that housewives should keep a constant check on the temperature control in their refrigerators. Every degree of temperature below 45 degrees for milk storage is equivalent to four days of shelf life, said another Roberts spokesman.

Liebers reported that cottage cheese runs on a 14-day code. The numbers printed on the bottom of the carton indicate the day of the month the product should be pulled from the shelf, as well as which of the four vats the product was made in. For example, 253 would mean that the product would be removed from the market on the 25th of that month and that it was prepared in vat "three." He added that the vat number is important in a cultured product in case the item should need to be recalled for any reason.

Changed Recently
Also using open-dating is Fairmont Food Co. Ed Cotner, state merchandising manager for Fairmont, said that his company recently changed to this system "in the interest of the consumer."

When asked what the length of the code was for milk and cottage cheese, Cotner indicated that this information was "confidential." He did say that in the summer months the products are not pre-coded as far ahead as in the colder seasons.

Cotner suggested that the shelf life for both milk and cottage cheese was eight to 12 days from production, when kept between 32 and 40 degrees. He estimated that both products would still be good four to five days after the pull-date.

He also said that Fairmont routeman making full-service deliveries to stores are responsible for rotating the merchandise and moving the older items forward.

No Code System
At the other end of the spectrum, Goodrich Dairy uses no system of code-dating for milk.

Paul Wagner, sales manager for Goodrich in Omaha, said that codes were "simply not necessary" in Goodrich's case. He explained that daily deliveries were made to most stores and that the turnover was so great that "most milk products are not in the stores more than two days."

Goodrich, unlike most dairies, operates its own retail outlets. For this reason, said Wagner, the company "never loses control of the product." It is a matter of supervision, he added, "from production to final sale."

For cottage cheese Wagner explained that a 10-letter word — "brickhouse" — was used to code pull-dates on the bottom of the containers. Each letter of the word stands for a number from one to 10, so that a code of "br" would indicate that the product should be removed from the shelves on the 12th of the month. Wagner added that cottage cheese runs on a five-day code.

"Not For Consumer"
Taking another point of view, John Spray, district manager of Beatrice Foods Co., producer of Meadowgold products, said that "code-dating is not for the consumer."

Spray said that he did not feel the consumer should be "burdened" with such information, indicating that the codes are for the "men who service the accounts and for the health dept. and the state who check the product."

He went on to say that his company does not make an effort to educate the consumer on its code, but that it will "guarantee" its product at all times, and that the consumer can buy Meadowgold products "with confidence."

Spray remarked that he does not believe in open-dating. He added that freshness depends more on the control of the product at the plant, good truck refrigeration and correct handling of the product on display.

Mac McCubbin, chief of the bureau of dairies and foods — a division of the Department of Agriculture — says he is also against open-dating.

He added that open-dating would cause dairies to dispose of great quantities of milk that were still fresh and palatable. In the end, he continued, the consumer would have to pay more for his milk.

In McCubbin's opinion, "code-dating does not take into account how the product is handled."

He went on to say that the dairy industry is the "most regulated and standardized industry we have."

McCubbin indicated that there is a state Grade A milk law which requires that milk be kept at a temperature of 45 degrees or lower. He added that there are no statutory requirements concerning freshness dating on milk products.

Leaders Promise Program Actions

... TV FORMAT SAID EFFECTIVE

©The New York Times

Washington — Democrats in Congress presented their own State of the Union message Friday by using a nationwide television program to accuse President Nixon of neglecting problems at home and prolonging the war in Indochina.

Against the criticism was a promise by the House Democratic leaders that the Democratic-controlled Congress would enact in some form such major administration proposals as welfare reform, revenue-sharing and water pollution.

But responding to Nixon's plea in his State of the Union message for Congress to set aside partisanship in an election year, Speaker Carl Albert emphasized that "cooperation is a two-way street."

"We are going to cooperate with the President on everything that is in the national interest," said Albert, summing up the Democratic TV show. "We simultaneously call upon the President to stop vetoing bills that are in the national interest."

To many Democrats, the form of their rebuttal to the Nixon message was as significant as the words, for after years of experimenting, Democrats in Congress believed they had finally hit upon an effective television format for answering Nixon.

Talk-Panel Combination

The format was a combination of a TV talk show and panel discussion as a group of nine Democratic representatives took turns criticizing the administration and answering questions phoned in from across the nation or raised in the studio audience.

As a novel feature in a program entitled "Your Voice Counts," the Democrats gave listeners a chance to make toll-free calls over a special leased telephone circuit midway through the program. The circuit was swamped with calls from throughout the nation.

In years past, congressional Democrats have relied largely upon party leaders and elders to present their rebuttal to the president's State of the Union message. This year they deliberately turned to new or younger faces in the party.

The panel was composed of Sens. Thomas F. Eagleton of Missouri, William Proxmire of Wisconsin, Frank Church of Idaho, Lloyd M. Bentson of Texas, and Reps. John Brademas of Indiana, Martha W. Griffiths of Michigan, Ralph H. Metcalfe of Illinois,

'Hughes Biographer' Leans To Hoax Theory

©The New York Times

New York — The attorney for Clifford Irving, the novelist who claims to have compiled an autobiography of Howard R. Hughes, said Friday that he and his client were "leaning" to a theory that the novelist had been a victim of a hoax by a "gang of six to eight people."

Attorney Martin S. Ackerman said such a hoax would have had to involve an actor who impersonated Hughes and "two master forgers" able to duplicate the handwriting of the billionaire.

Several hours later after Irving flew to Spain, Ackerman denied that he really favored this theory and said that instead he leaned to what he called "the loyal servant" theory. Under this theory, a mysterious Swiss bank account into which went money intended for Hughes would have been opened by a Hughes employee instead of an imposter.

'Answers' Filed

Meanwhile, attorneys for the Hughes interests filed in State Supreme Court here a two-page, typewritten questionnaire bearing what purported to be Hughes' handwritten answers describing as "forgeries" the autobiographical materials to have been published by McGraw-Hill.

Friday night Irving left the country, departing from Kennedy Airport at 7 p.m., for what his lawyer described as "a weekend with his family" on an island off the coast of Spain. Ackerman said Irving was expected back on Monday and that the trip had been planned for several days.

Life magazine issued a statement strongly opposing his departure.

In other developments, Hughes lawyers gave the court the transcript of a letter, reputed to be from the Swiss Credit Bank, saying that Hughes never cashed or deposited checks from McGraw-Hill. And Zurich banking sources said a woman, and not Hughes, had opened the account in that bank.

John Melcher of Montana and Lenore K. Sullivan of Missouri.

Leaders Sum Up

Notably missing were the committee chairmen and the presidential candidates, although in keeping with past practice, the job of summing up the program was given to the two House leaders, Speaker Albert and Rep. Hale Boggs of Louisiana.

Serving as a chorman and moderator, Eagleton led off the informally cast program with the observation that Nixon has presented "a domestic grabbag" in his address.

"No one could possibly disagree with the broad, humane generalities in his speech ...," he said. "The problem is not where we are going, but how we're going to get there."

With that as a preface, the panelists, each assigned a particular subject, made the following observations in brief statements followed by questions:

Brademas — There is a large gap between the promises and performances of the administration on education. "On the record, not of words but of deeds, no administration of this generation has been so hostile to education as has that of Richard Nixon."

Mrs. Griffiths — The President's health insurance proposals are inadequate and the administration has failed to give active support to the equal rights amendment for women pending in Congress.

Proxmire — Unemployment remains the No. 1 domestic problem: "What does the President propose to do about it? Nothing."

Mrs. Sullivan — In every area of consumer protection, the administration has been "timid and indecisive."

Church — Nixon, upon his election, could have withdrawn the bulk of the ground forces in nine months, but instead the withdrawal is being "dragged out over four agonizing years" and the "end of the war is still not in sight."

Metcalfe — The administration has not responded to the needs of cities and minority groups and has "clearly misplaced priorities" by now proposing a $5.5 billion space shuttle.

Bentson — Nixon in 1963 made "huge promises," suggesting that "the crime problem would be solved if only he became president" but crime rates continue to rise and "the empty promise of the past have become the failures of the present."

'Hughes Biographer' Leans To Hoax Theory

that bore the name "H. R. Hughes."

Three checks totaling $650,000 were assertedly paid to Hughes in payment for material given to Irving and found their way into the account.

Ackerman said he and Irving "have developed three theories" about the controversy.

'Loyal Servant'

The first theory he described as the "loyal servant theory" in which an employee of Hughes opened the account in the Swiss bank. The second theory, he said, concerned an "imposter." The third, he went on, would have Irving as the imposter.

"We've rejected the last theory and lean toward the second," he said.

Ackerman said, "You'd have to have a gang of six to eight people involved, including two master forgers and an actor 6 feet 3 inches tall who weighed 120 pounds."

"Then you'd have to have someone who bankrolled it and someone who did the research," he went on. "Someone paid for the travel. A gang that clever would not be doing it for just a couple of hundred thousand dollars."

Ackerman said that, under his theory, two master forgers would have been necessary because "one man 6 foot 3 inches tall wrote two letters in front of Cliff — the other forger would be the one to sign the name to the letter."

Later, Ackerman said that his words had been meant ironically and that the details he outlined of such an "imposter" theory were so "preposterous" that he assumed the irony would be grasped.

Rejecting his earlier statement, he said he and Irving actually believed the first theory to be the most viable.

Amendment Proposal Could Hike Senators' Pay

The Legislature Friday gave first-round approval to three proposed constitutional amendments, one of which would indirectly permit state senators to receive more pay.

The discussion of constitutional amendments on general file, the first of three steps in the legislative process, occupied the bulk of the Legislature's forenoon session.

The pay raise bill, introduced by Sen. David Stahmer of Omaha, would have originally pegged state senators at no more than one-half the governor's salary, now $25,000.

Option Established
But an amendment to LB311 adopted Friday struck that provision, substituting a new system under which the senators would continue to draw their present pay (no more than $400 per month) but would have the option of setting an additional per diem rate to be paid senators for work between legislative sessions.

"Obviously, the first consideration is what the people are willing to accept," Stahmer said of his bill.

"But there is a great deal of additional work to be done, and, in effect, this amendment would be a step to get more work out of the Legislature."

Wording Questioned
The bill advanced on a 30-4 vote. Little opposition to the measure appeared during floor debate, although a number of senators questioned the wording of the proposal.

"It's not plain, it's confusing," said Sen. Calvin Carsten of Avooca. He questioned whether the bill might actually reduce legislative compensation, restricting the $400 per month to only the five months actually spent in session.

But Stahmer assured him that the wording had been checked out with both the bill drafters' office and the State Attorney General and that they were both confident that the language was correct.

Stahmer also won approval of an amendment which would place the proposal on the primary ballot this spring.

Commission Bill Advanced
Also advanced Friday over some opposition was a proposed amendment which would require the legislature to appoint a constitutional revision study commission at least every 10 years. The commission would review the constitution and suggest possible changes to the Unicameral.

In its original form, LB623 would have required that the electorate get a chance to call a constitutional convention every 10 years, but that provision was struck by amendment Friday.

Sen. Herb Nore of Genoa, opposing the bill, said that it would "merely force us to spend $75,000 every 10 years whether we need it or not."

And Sen. Leslie Stull of Alliance said that it would only clutter the constitution. "I don't think we should try to legislate with the constitution," he said.

Sponsoring Sen. George Syas of Omaha argued, however, that the requirement is necessary because the Legislature is traditionally hesitant to order such in-depth studies. He said the recommendations could be ignored by the Legislature because there would be no requirement that the state actually pay out money to put the commission's recommendations on the ballot if the Legislature was opposed to it.

The bill advanced on a 26-8 vote.

Also advanced Friday was LB503, which would place a provision in the state constitution restricting felons from being collectors or custodians of public money or property unless their civil rights have been restored.

Four other constitutional amendment proposals appeared briefly before the body late in the forenoon session, but the senators voted to table consideration of them until Monday.

Mari Sandoz Day Is Asked

The Legislature Friday was asked to mark May 11 as Mari Sandoz Day in Nebraska.

The day is the birthday of the famed western authoress.

The request was contained in a resolution sponsored Friday by Sen. Leslie Stull of Alliance which also asked Nebraskans to "reflect on their heritage and remember their ancestors."

Bill Would Double Executive Board

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

The Legislature's Government and Military Affairs Committee Friday recommended that the size of the powerful Legislative Council executive board be more than doubled.

The executive board, which acts as the representative of the Legislature when it is now composed of five members.

Under terms of an amended version of LB1129, proposed by Sen. Fred Carstens of Beatrice, the size of the board would be increased to 11 senators.

Selection Outlined
Three members would be elected by the Legislature from each of the three congressional districts. Lawmakers would select a chairman from the Legislature at large, and the speaker would serve as the 11th member.

That plan attracted 5-0 committee approval and was sent to the floor for action.

Sen. William Swanson of Lincoln, current chairman of the executive board, agreed with Carstens that the body should be enlarged.

Its expanded duties and assignments are "frankly more than five people can handle," Swanson said.

Held For Action
The committee held for later action an amended version of LB1155, which would direct the Government Committee every other year to evaluate the state's civil defense program and recommend improvements and possible legislative changes to the Unicameral.

As originally introduced by Sen. Loran Schmit of David City, the bill would have removed the civil defense agency from the office of the adjutant general in order to provide civilian direction of the program.

But Schmit told the committee he has since learned that the agency is under civilian control in the form of the governor.

Maj. Gen. Lyle Welch, adjutant general and administrator of the civil defense program, said he "strongly favor(s) civilian control" and now operates under "carefully limited authority subject to the direction of the governor."

Also heard by the committee without opposition was LB1156 sponsored by Swanson, which provides for collection and equalization of Lincoln city taxes by Lancaster county subject to a joint agreement.

City Asks Snowmobiles Be Allowed On Streets

Representatives of the city of Lincoln asked Friday that snowmobiles be taken off the sidewalks and be allowed to operate on roadways within towns and cities.

The Legislature's Public Works Committee took no action on the bill involved, Oakland Sen. C. W. Holmquist's LB1149.

Lincoln City corporation counsel Ralph Nelson said that the 1971 law which laid down regulations for snowmobile operation requires snowmobiles to stay on the right side of the right-of-way.

"That may protect the interstate and highways pretty well," he said, "but in town we've got lawns and trees and sidewalks to worry about."

snowmobiles be operated on the actual roadway except for highways, where the current law would still apply.

Also heard Friday without committee action was a bill to raise by $1 the cost of obtaining or filing a lien on a certificate of title for a motor vehicle. The fees are currently $2 and $1, respectively.

The proposal, in Alliance Sen. Leslie Stull's LB1113, was supported by the Nebraska Association of County Officials, who said that the extra dollar would stay with the counties.

It was opposed by representatives of the Nebraska Consumer Credit Association and the Nebraska Bankers Association, both of whom argued that the increase was unwarranted since the actual work involved "is a matter of minutes."

Also heard and held Friday were bills stiffening brake requirements on trailers and removing the city-owned Lincoln Bus line from the jurisdiction of the State Railway Commission.

Commissioner Eric Rasmussen appeared in favor of the latter bill, Lincoln Sen. Roland Luedtke's LB1178, and said that the city council and the commission are presently duplicating each other's efforts.

Doctors' Aide Training Bill Is Approved

The Legislature gave final approval to the development of a physicians assistant training program at the University of Nebraska Medical Center in Omaha.

Sen. Loran Schmit of David City, chief sponsor of LB985, says the measure would ultimately give physicians another pair of hands to work with.

But the bill still faces the final hurdle of becoming a law in the governor's office. It was sent there on a 41-3 vote of the lawmakers.

If Gov. J. J. Exon signs the measure, the medical school would receive $96,000 for use in developing the training program for the assistants.

Schmit said the program would primarily benefit those physicians who are working in rural areas. Many of them he said, work alone even though their case loads indicate the need for more than one doctor in order to provide adequate health care.

However, according to Schmit, the adoption of his training program bill is not the final step to providing the extra help.

The legislature will later have to come back and set up licensing procedures for the assistants once the NU training program is in operation.

Bills Passed

Bill passed on final reading Friday:

LB646E (Luedtke) — Providing that municipal court clerk salaries shall be set by the city council.
LB693E (Warner) — Providing that second class cities and villages may draw warrants in excess of 8% of the current levy.
LB746E (Proulx) — Providing for acquisition of public buildings by first class cities.
LB907 (Warner) — Providing for accumulation and investment of funds for street improvement projects by municipalities.
LB913E (Proulx, Luedtke) — Amending law related to bonds of indebtedness, with respect to showing of interest rate.
LB1049 (Swanson) — Harmonizing law related to civil procedures.
LB137 (Burbach) — Requiring long range planning by natural resource districts.
LB340 (Burbach) — Reducing from two to one mill the maximum levy for natural resource districts.
LB541 (Burbach) — Restricting powers of soil and water conservation districts.
LB710 (Waldron) — Prohibiting false campaign statements by candidates.
LB985 (Schmit) — Providing for training of physicians' assistants.
LB1058 (Swanson) — Correcting sections of law related to highways.

Fremont Council Is Asked To OK Sunday Liquor

Fremont (AP) — The Fremont City Council will be asked at its regular meeting Tuesday to approve an ordinance calling for the sale of liquor-by-the-drink on Sundays, Jack Sutton, city administrator reported.

The council must act no later than this if the proposition is to appear on the April 4 municipal election ballot.

Last May 25 liquor dealers in the county petitioned the council and in July the council voted to submit the proposal for Sunday liquor sales to the voters.

Three Measures Pass Changing 1969 NRD Bill

A trio of bills altering the natural district resource law adopted by the 1969 Legislature sailed through the Unicameral Friday on final reading.

The measures will become law when signed by Gov. J. J. Exon.

The results of an interim study committee review of the NRD program, the measures require long-range planning by the districts and halve from two to one mill the maximum levy a district may charge without an authorizing vote of the district electorate.

The 24 districts drawn up by the State Soil and Water Conservation Commission are scheduled to become effective July 1, replacing numerous local soil and water conservancy districts and watershed districts.

The three bills approved Friday were LB437, favored 40-0, LB540, approved 21-1; and LB 541, with a 39-3 margin.

Besides lowering the mill levy, the measures require compliance by districts with the state's uniform budgeting act, require six-year planning by the districts, and restrict the investment power of the soil and water conservancy districts.

'Campaign Truth' Measure Passed By Legislature

The Legislature Friday passed 35-8 on final reading a measure said by its sponsor to be a "campaign truth" bill.

The law enacted as LB710, would prevent deliberately false statements by a political candidate.

Sponsored by Sen. J. James Waldron of Callaway, the measure prohibits the use of a statement the "user knows is false or which he uses in reckless disregard of the truth."

Once the prosecution proves the statement is false, the bill says, "the burden of proving lack of knowledge or reckless disregard of the truth shall be upon the defendant."

The measure provides a $500 fine and/or a jail sentence of up to six months.

Author Suspects Hughes Hoax
New York — Clifford Irving, the novelist who compiled what he says is an autobiography of Howard R. Hughes, is "leaning" toward a theory that he had been a victim of a hoax by a "gang of six to eight people," his attorney said. Such a gang, the attorney added, would have to include an actor who impersonated Hughes, as well as "two master forgers." (More on Page 1.)

Dock Strike End Sought
Key Biscayne, Fla. — In a special message to Congress, President Nixon asked for legislation "by the end of next week" ending the "intolerable" West Coast dock strike. (More on Page 2.)

'Hughes' A German Blonde
Zurich — Swiss banking sources disclosed

that "H. R. Hughes," who opened the numbered Swiss bank account into which $650,000 was paid for the rights to Howard Hughes's autobiography, was a German-speaking blonde woman in her early 30s using a forged passport. The money, of course, has been withdrawn.

71 Accused Of Car Thefts
New York — A federal indictment charged 71 persons with involvement in a ring that allegedly stole and sold more than 4,500 luxury cars in the last three years. Fifty-eight of the suspects were rounded up by FBI agents in various parts of the country. The car-to-order ring allegedly operated out of a store in Brooklyn.

Democrats Answer Nixon

TV Station Transfer Set
Washington — The Federal Communications Commission set March 19 as the date for the transfer of television Channel 5 in Boston from the Boston Herald-Traveler Corp. to Boston Broadcasters, Inc. But the Herald-Traveler indicated that it would move to block the action, the latest in a 15-year dispute.

Bill Sought To Force Dock Strike End

Key Biscayne, Fla. (AP) — President Nixon sent emergency legislation to Congress on Friday to force striking West Coast longshoremen back to work immediately while a federal panel settles the long-festering dock dispute through binding arbitration.

Nixon asked Congress, which went into session Tuesday, to act within a week to end "the dimensions of destruction which this strike is wreaking upon its victims."

Elderly, Chronically Ill Are Hit Hardest By Flu

Atlanta (AP) — The National Center for Disease Control (CDC) says Hong Kong flu has claimed nearly a thousand lives this year, especially among the elderly and chronically ill.

In its report for the week ending Jan. 15, the center said Thursday 843 deaths were attributed to either influenza or pneumonia, 268 deaths higher than normal.

There were confirmed regional outbreaks of the flu in 15 states, isolated outbreaks in 14 states and respiratory illnesses not yet confirmed as the Hong Kong variety in 10 states, the report said.

The Hong Kong-type flu struck many areas of the United States in 1968-69, killing 27,900 persons. The CDC said most were elderly, the ones who suffer most from influenza.

The center said widespread outbreaks have been reported this month in Maine, Massachusetts, Rhode Island,

Action Demanded
The chief executive coupled the call for special legislation with a demand that Congress act this session on a broader measure he proposed two years ago to cope with crippling transportation strikes.

Twenty-four ports from the Canadian to the Mexican borders were paralyzed July 1 when 13,600 members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union walked off their jobs. Nixon invoked the Taft-Hartley Act in October and the dock workers returned to work, but they resumed their strike Monday — three weeks after the cooling-off injunction expired.

In his message to Congress, Nixon said the dispute has lingered "because a few have been insensitive to the harm they are inflicting upon the many who are not a party to it." He charged, too, that the American people "have been made hostage to those few who persist in prolonging this dispute."

He didn't name names, but presidential press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler made it clear that Nixon was referring to union leaders. Ziegler said Nixon and others in the administration believe the ILWU has shown "an unreasonable

Bridges Balky
ILWU President Harry Bridges said, "Any legislation proposed by the President will not settle the strike." Longshoremen leaders contended also that Nixon's proposal would set a precedent that organized labor could not accept.

But in San Francisco, the Pacific Maritime Association said through Secretary James Robertson that the shippers support any legislation aimed at resolving the strike.

"It is still our preference, however, to negotiate a settlement across the bargaining table," Robertson said. Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz announced in Denver that he has invited farm leaders to an emergency meeting in Washington Wednesday to review the dock strike situation. Butz, in a speech to the American National Cattlemen's Association, said the tie-up is "a serious emergency for American farmers."

The legislation would work this way:

Immediately upon its becoming law, the strike would end. The secretary of labor would appoint a three-member arbitration board which would, within 40 days, prepare settlement terms. The board's settlement would be binding on both sides for at least 18 months, meaning there would be no strike or lockout during that time.

Funds Lacking

United Nations, N.Y. (AP) — Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said the United Nations will be $24 million short by the end of June unless steps are taken to meet the financial crisis.

Richard Charles LaPoint

Ex-Chutist Accused Of Air Piracy

Denver (UPI) — A former Army paratrooper and beach bum who bailed out of a commandeered Hughes Airwest DC9 with $50,000 ransom but was captured by FBI agents, was charged Friday with air piracy.

The Air Force, which sent two fighter-bombers to chase the airliner from Nevada to Colorado, said it would use its jets to stop future bailout hijackings.

Richard Charles LaPoint, 23, who sprained his left ankle and a wrist when he landed in a wheat field Thursday near Akron, Colo., was ordered jailed without bond by U.S. Magistrate Royce D. Sickler.

Conviction of the federal charge of air piracy carries a maximum sentence of death. Sickler set Jan. 26 for a preliminary hearing in Denver for LaPoint, who appeared in court in a wheelchair.

The judge told LaPoint he was entitled to receive medical attention for his injuries, but the hijacker told the judge: "How about some mental assistance?"

Last Months Of '71 See Less Inflation

measured by the gross national product — slowed dramatically in the fourth quarter, partly because of the freeze, to show the smallest rate of inflation since 1965.

Food prices, partly uncontrolled, rose 1.1% in December, or 0.7% after allowance for normal seasonal increases.

The best illustration of the effect of the end of the freeze was in the sector called non-food commodities, which rose

0.3% in December after showing no change for the three months of the freeze. A good example of a specific item was new cars, whose prices were allowed to rise by the Price Commission after the freeze.

The other sector, services rose 0.3% in December, little changed from the preceding three months but substantially less than the customary monthly rise during the sustained period of inflation.

Enemy Hits CIA Base

Vientiane, Laos (AP) — Enemy forces overran some government positions on a key ridge overlooking Long Cheng and hand-to-hand fighting was reported Friday for control of the former U.S. Central Intelligence Agency base.

American military informants said Laotian troops, who had pushed an enemy regiment off most of the ridge top three days ago, were forced to abandon a helicopter landing pad in the counterattack.

It began Thursday night with a heavy bombardment by North Vietnamese mortars and artillery followed by an infantry assault against the government-held bunker complex.

"Several positions were taken by the enemy," said one U.S. officer. "Fighting is continuing, some of it hand to hand."

He said American jets were experiencing difficulty in knocking out the North Vietnamese long range artillery, which fires on Long Cheng from the southern edge of the Plain of Jars. So far they have been able to destroy only five of the estimated 20 guns.

Malta Talks At Standstill

Rome — The talks on military bases in Malta that began here Jan. 17 reached an impasse Friday and were suspended.

Maltese Prime Minister Dom Mintoff and British Defense Minister Lord Carrington both flew home to report to their governments. Both men said they might soon resume negotiating, maybe again in Rome.

Draft Lottery To Be Feb. 2

Washington (UPI) — The Selective Service said Friday it will hold its annual lottery Feb. 2 so that young men celebrating their 19th birthday this year will quickly learn their chances of being drafted in 1973.

With draft calls continuing to decline, it is very possible that few of them actually will be inducted.

The previous three annual lotteries were held in the summer but this one was moved up to give young men born in 1953 maximum advance notice.

SPEAKING OUT:

By STEVEN LEVEINE
Ohio Senator Robert Taft has introduced a bill that, if enacted, would grant limited amnesty to American draft evaders. Limited amnesty in this instance would mean that the approximately 70,000 young men in foreign exile and the 300 young men now in jail could go home if they promised to do three years in the military or alternative service.

The chances of the bill passing both houses of Congress are slim; those of its escaping a presidential veto, virtually nonexistent.

But Taft does raise an issue that, with most of the public more or less duped into believing the Indochina war is ending, will shortly be extremely current. And simultaneously, he proposes what will, eventually, be the likely course of national policy on that issue.

When the war nominally ends, guilt, blame and responsibility will be caroming from every corner. Indemnities will be retired. Forgiveness will be granted. Penalties will be assessed. Somewhere in the midst of all that, the question of those young men, and of the thousands of military deserters and political prisoners who swell their ranks, will arise.

Initial Studies
Initial studies show the American public to be inclined toward its own peculiar brand of generosity.

A recent poll, for instance, shows that about 70% of those sampled favored some sort of amnesty for draft evaders and resisters (only about 30% supported such magnanimity for deserters). However, all but about 30% again felt that some compensatory servitude should be obligatory.

The press remains largely cool to the whole idea at present, but it could warm up, despite the surprisingly unenlightened views recently expressed by one of my junior colleagues.

Certainly, any such move is going to enjoy automatic support from liberal legislators, some of whom, like George McGovern, have already gone on record as being pro-amnesty.

Compromises being effected as they are, some sort of amnesty-with-service schema is probably no more than three years away. It will probably be a general amnesty, affecting Americans sentenced for war crimes as well, all in a spirit more of forgetfulness than forgiveness. The Vietnam war was not pronounced ex cathedra; it has been a doctrine in question. It's hard for even the average worshiper of state power to get very self-righteous about it.

This shall the debts be retired. It will be decided that the best place to drop the blame is on history, and let's not talk about it any more, okay?

Steven Levine

It would be neat enough if everything could be conjured away in this manner.

Response to Taft Bill
One notes with interest the response to the Taft bill of various organizations that involve draft resistance and/or evasion. So far, they have utterly rejected it as punitive, insulting and utterly irrelevant.

It would appear that the individuals in question do not view themselves as being in a mendicant posture before the great white father in Washington. They apparently do not cast themselves as traitors and cowards seeking to regain the lost respect of a firm but fair democratic nation.

In the main, those who left see themselves as moral refugees from a tyranny.

Ironically, to much of America, this will seem monumental hubris. It is ironic because the hubris is on the other side.

Those who condemn the conduct of Americans who, for any reason and by any means, avoided direct participation in the Indochina adventure, might have their attention directed to the conduct of those who did not.

On Other Shoulders
Upon the contemplation of a palm, of fragmentation grenades and flechettes, of defoliants, of 14,000-pound bombs, of tiger cages, of one-man presidential races, of heroin smuggling in military aircraft, of heroin use by military personnel, of the rapine, the torture, the murder that have all been the basic stuff of this nation's presence in Southeast Asia, the real hubris comes to lie upon other shoulders. It is indeed strange that those guiltiest of complicity in a vast and horrible crime should be idly contemplating clemency for those who declined roles in the conspiracy. One pictures liberal Nazis in 1938 chatting over schnapps about possibly allowing that misguided Albert Einstein to return home after the situation stabilizes, if he promises to be a good German, of course.

History, as those liberal Nazis found out, sometimes defines criminality in surprising ways. It must have seemed a long way from the Reichstag to Nuernberg.

If it is amnesty that is under consideration, then, let there be a real judging of where the malfeasance was committed; whether by a government that broke the law or a minority that obeyed it; and after that judgment is made, maybe instead of backhandedly offering a conditional indulgence for that minority, the mass who went along ought to politely ask them to come back and please to tell everybody how they managed not to make the same mistake as their neighbors.

The Taft bill, alas, and the national policy it represents, is no more mature than the policy that aggressed in Asia in 1954.

LIFE BEGINS AT FORTY:

Lonely Divorcee, 50, Is Considering Remarriage With Bossy, Unromantic Ex-Husband

By ROBERT PETERSON

Question: "I'm 50 and got a divorce last year after 20 monotonous years with a man who was never really bad but was never much good, either. He liked being the boss and even insisted on buying my clothes and the groceries. He gave me only five dollars a week spending money, yet he refused to let me take a job and earn money of my own. He talked little and I never knew what he was thinking. He must have had a girl somewhere because he doled out his romance on a strictly once a month basis. I've been on my own for a year and he gives me $200 monthly alimony. Last week he came over, says he's lonely, and wants me to remarry him. I'm lonely too, and don't see any other marital prospects. Would I be crazy going back to him?"

Answer: No. If you're lonely, something is better than nothing. But make a few premarital demands. Much of the monotony in your marriage apparently stemmed largely from being at home too much, with a feeling of being boxed in, without independence or money of your own for personal projects or shopping sprees.

Property Tax For Police, Fire Only Urged

Property taxes should be used only to finance police and fire protection, Wallace Peterson of Lincoln said.

Peterson, chairman of the University of Nebraska's Department of Economics, is a candidate for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

"There is a reasonable relationship between property owned and benefits received from police and fire protection," Peterson wrote in this week's issue of The Nebraska Farmer.

As a general principle, he said, taxes ought to be based either upon ability to pay or upon benefits received.

Financing education should become a state, rather than a local, duty, Peterson said. The shift to this method of financing must be coupled with the mandatory elimination of property tax levies for education, he said.

"This proposed shift does not contemplate any basic change in our system of local control of educational programs through locally-elected school boards," Peterson stressed.

"Local school districts should

Tell him you may take him back if he lets you take a job or gives you a more generous allowance. And you may as well ask him to let you do the shopping, and demand henceforth a believable explanation for any nights he plans to come dragging in at midnight.

Question: "I thought everyone loved birthday parties. My late wife did—we had dozens of big parties. Last week I planned a big surprise for my new wife's 57th birthday. While she was clearing up the supper dishes some 45 guests appeared at the door. I thought she's get a kick out of it, but instead she went upstairs and started crying. Said she hates birthdays and surprise parties and couldn't understand how I'd do something like this to her. She wouldn't come down until I promised there'd be no more birthday parties. Is something wrong with her?"

Answer: Most people enjoy natal day recognition. But it's my observation that maybe 10% of people that maybe obsession about birthdays and would rather not be reminded of them. The cause seems to stem from poor attitudes toward growing older and a desire to feel immune from the aging process. It may also stem from extreme sensitivity to the brevity and tenuousness of life—a desire to forget the passage of another milestone signaling one less year in the lifespan.

Question: "I'm 65 but everyone takes me for 45 or 50 and I never tell them differently. I enjoy being taken for younger and spend two hours a day on my cosmetics and appearance. What's wrong with that?"

Answer: There's nothing wrong with trying to look one's best. But it's not very bright wasting valuable hours trying to turn back the clock. Whether you look 45 or 65 means little when it comes to having fun and making friends, and you'd be wiser cultivating your mind and taking a keener interest in others. You may think folks like you for 20 years younger but some of these folks may be putting you on

IN PERSPECTIVE

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

There are undoubtedly times when the American people are their own worst enemy. Such may be the case in the matter of President Nixon's State of the Union message to Congress. First, comments are made by others that his call for statesmanship rather than partisanship is nice but impractical.

The assumption is that in this election year there will be plenty of politics and the President's appeal is itself dismissed as a political gimmick. Of course, we do have a two-party system and that is an adversary situation but wouldn't it be nice if, some time, we could have a Congress in which statesmanship was first and foremost?

Others dismiss the President's address as a rehash, a "recycling of the State of the Union," as Sen. Hubert Humphrey called it. Yet, the address included several new items, half a dozen highly significant pending proposals and some 90 other prospective areas of legislation.

For those without access to the text of Nixon's remarks, the speech contained an outline of principles worth repeating, principles on which the President seeks to advance the nation. They are:

"We believe in independence, and self-reliance, and in the creative value of the competitive spirit.

"We believe in full and equal opportunity for all Americans, and in the protection of individual rights and liberties.

"We believe in the family as the keystone of the community, and in the community as the keystone of the nation.

"We believe in compassion toward those in need.

"We believe in a system of law, justice and order as the basis of a genuinely free society.

"We believe that a person should get what he works for—and those who can should work for what they get.

"We believe in the capacity of people to make their own decisions, in their own lives and in their own communities—and we believe in their rights to make those decisions."

But such principles are all too often recited and then forgotten. What might we accomplish if we really dedicated ourselves to those principles and forgot about the many narrow interests that dictate our course of action?

The point is that there is a lot of meat and a lot of challenge to Congress and to the American people in the contents of the President's message. No, it is not a perfect address in that it would meet with the total approval of all people.

We have our own specific differences with it. Our own concern over the domestic economy and unemployment is growing and the message did not attack this with much vigor.

We agree with the Humphrey criticism which says that new federal aid for schools for the sake of property tax relief should come from income tax reform, not a value added tax. Our conviction is that income tax reform is one of the most pressing and vital needs in the nation today, an unexplored opportunity to better use the wealth of the nation for some of its urgent human needs.

It is disappointing, too, that defense spending continues to rise, that the national debt continues to climb and that the federal budget never operates any more in the black. Certainly, we can rest assured that an end to the Vietnam war would produce no problems in the area of reduced federal spending.

That war could end tomorrow and the economy would never know it. The financial slack would be picked up so quickly elsewhere that it is foolish to think of this as any problem at all.

But if we could obtain some of the statesmanship of which the President has spoken and if we could implement the principles that he cites, we might begin to make progress on many fronts, including those where the President himself might be doing an inadequate job.

The State of the Union as Nixon outlined it isn't a state of utopia but it could be charted in that direction if there were a real national will to do so.

Alaska Pipeline Decision To Be Forthcoming Soon

WASHINGTON — Underneath the permafrost of Alaska's North Slope lie upwards of 10 billion barrels of oil. On the surface lies tundra — an undulating plain usually covered with grass, lichen, sedge and moss. Oil and tundra do not mix, and that explains why the decision on whether to build the Trans-Alaska Pipeline has generated such a heated controversy.

The proposed 48-inch pipeline would extend 789 miles from Prudhoe Bay on the North Slope to the ice-free port of Valdez in southern Alaska. Some segments of the line would be buried, others elevated. It would cross 350 streams and rivers. Its construction would require thousands of workers, fleets of heavy machinery, massive quantities of materials, and a total expenditure of at least $2 billion.

In defense of the pipeline project, the oil companies point out that proven North Slope reserves equal about a third of the combined reserves of all other oil-producing states. The royalties, jobs, and other benefits stemming from full-time oil production would ease the perennial financial woes of Alaska. But all these considerations are outweighed, environmentalists argue, by the fact that the pipeline could permanently damage the Arctic environment. In its final environmental impact statement on the project, expected shortly, the Interior Department will determine whether or not the pipeline is built.

Alaska's ecology is as fragile as its climate is harsh. When summer comes to the Arctic, the sun warms the tundra until it thaws and becomes spongy muck, held together only by its thin cover of vegetation. If this cover is stripped away, rapid erosion follows. Thus, in a matter of days a drainage ditch

The Selling Of The Presidency — 1972

Report Held Back Again

Mayor Schwartzkopf said Thursday that on the advice of City Atty. Dick Wood, release of the Human Rights Commission's report of its investigation into alleged police brutality will be held until a decision is handed down on Cleveland Randolph's resisting arrest charge.

Thus the report might not be made public for several weeks. The Randolph case went to trial earlier this month, but Municipal Judge Donald Grant allowed both the prosecution and defense attorneys in the case 30 days to file briefs before he reaches a decision.

The Randolph case served as the initial impetus for the investigation. The young black, who pleaded innocent to resisting arrest charges in connection with an Oct. 24th City-County Jail incident, also has alleged he was brutally beaten by three Lincoln police officers at the jail. The matter was referred to the rights commission by the City Council. The commission broadened the scope of the investigation, however, and took 38 hours of testimony as a group as well as investigating individually to determine the status of police-community relationships.

The mayor and the council met privately

Wednesday night for 4½ hours to go over the commission's findings. Mayor Schwartzkopf said Thursday that the group will need to hold additional meetings to complete its review, giving that as a second reason for withholding the report.

We think the reasoning behind moving back the public release date fails. Judge Grant said during the Randolph trial that he was not concerned with whether there was any alleged or actual police brutality in deciding the case, but was "focusing attention strictly on whether this individual (Randolph) resisted arrest." Even without the judge's comment it hardly seems the report would be prejudicial to the outcome of the case. Besides, the scope of the entire investigation transcends the Randolph case in importance.

As to council review, the council has seen the report and quite rightfully should expect to have as many questions answered as are asked. But the council's deliberations will not or should not change the commission's findings.

What was originally intended as an "immediate investigation" into police brutality has turned into a long, drawn-out, secretive affair that goes against the best interests of Lincoln citizens and the police department.

Probation Concept Challenged

Traffic safety has become one of the more important issues of the day in Nebraska, due in no small part to last year's record for highway carnage and the fact that the state is not off to a very good start in 1972. A number of proposals from a variety of platforms have been offered in hopes of reducing the number of traffic accidents.

At a Regional Traffic Safety Conference in Omaha this week, Omaha Mayor Eugene Leahy found some support for his theory that higher fines would discourage motorists from violating traffic laws and thus, perhaps, curtail accidents. The suggestion is that judges need to crack down and assess the maximum fines allowed under the law.

The theory can be argued. We're not so sure that excessive fines will work toward decreasing the number of accidents.

Participants at the same conference decided to seek a change in state law to provide that driver's license penalty points be taken from motorists convicted of a traffic violation but then placed on probation. Currently, points are not assessed against persons on probation.

Lincoln Municipal Judges Thomas McManus and Neal Dusenberry oppose such a change, especially in regard to those persons who face the loss of their license because of points being assessed against them.

Loss of incentive to go on probation, the Lincoln judges argue, and thus the change would "absolutely destroy our whole probationary and counter-measures programs," according to McManus.

The probationary programs have worked beautifully, the judges argue, with statistics to back them up. People are better drivers because of the educational program. The Lincoln Municipal Court experience suggests that the proposed change in the law would be ill-advised.

JAMES RESTON

Demo Politicians Picking At Nixon Speech; Britain Would Use More Orderly Approach

WASHINGTON — President Nixon's State of the Union address is a reminder that most men can easily agree when they concentrate on the objectives and goals of life. Republican and Democrat, socialist and communist, Christian, Jew, Moslem and Hindu all unite in their yearnings for peace, security, equality, and mutual respect in a unified society.

Where they divide most bitterly is on the means by which these noble ends are to be reached. This, in fact, is what politics and government are all about.

Who can question Nixon's call for "high statesmanship," for putting the nation before personal and party interest, or "going forward together" to a world of security, peace, and full employment, with mutual respect and a generous regard for the rights and feelings of our fellow-countrymen?

Nobody is going to argue against his defense of independence, self-reliance, honest work, fair pay, law, justice, order, the family, and clean air and water, but on how these desirable things are to be achieved, the nation has always been divided, and is still deeply divided today.

The surprising thing about these beginning-of-the-year presidential speeches is not, however, that presidents concentrate on the things that unite the nation — most of them follow the same procedure — but that the American presidential system of government, unlike the system of parliamentary democracy, does not make provision for a formal and illuminating debate on what he says.

There was something mean and unworthy about the cheap jibes of most of the Democratic politicians after the President's address. He avoided the hard questions, but his speech had scope and dignity, and in its closing passages, a certain nobility of phrase and manner. As usual, however, it was dismissed by most Democratic legislators as an empty, platitudinous evasion of responsibility.

This would not happen, however, or at least would not happen so often, if the State of the Union address were the beginning of an honest political inquiry by the members of Congress into the true state of the nation instead of a television spectacular.

It will be said that such an inquiry will eventually be made in the coming months of the 92nd Congress, and this is true, but it will be spread out over months of disjointed discussion and there will be no coherence or continuity to the debate which can be followed by the people at the beginning of a presidential year.

Instead, what we now have is a one-sided proclamation, extolling the virtues and progress of the nation, and avoiding most of the blundering statesmanship, divisive policies, un-

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH

They Had A Dream

In the entire history of the American labor movement, only one black man ever emerged as a national leader. That one man was A. Philip Randolph who founded the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters in 1925 and served as its president for more than 40 years.

Randolph also was a vice president of the AFL-CIO with which the brotherhood was affiliated and a member of the AFL-CIO's executive committee. From that base, he fought for the laboring man and also battled discrimination both within the unions and without. He came to be recognized as one of the most influential leaders in the civil rights movement and one of its most effective spokesmen.

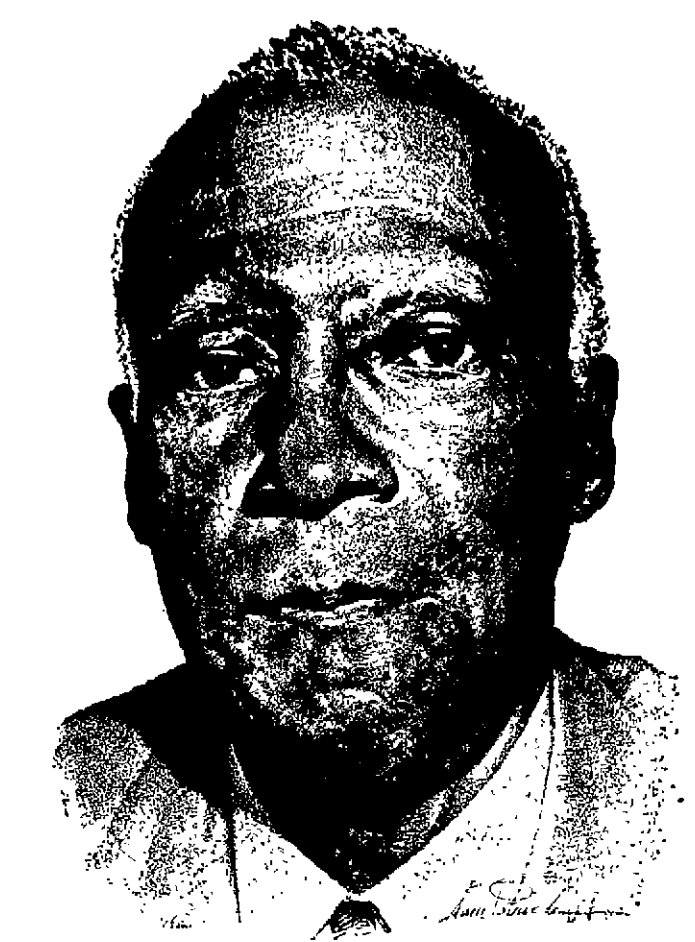

Born in Crescent City, Fla., in 1889, Randolph was the son of a minister in the African Methodist Church. As a boy he worked as a grocery store clerk, sold newspapers and picked up other odd jobs. When he grew older, Randolph laid track for the railroad.

When he finished high school at Cookman Institute in Jacksonville, Randolph left home for New York City where he worked as an elevator operator, porter and waiter while attending New York City College.

A self-styled radical at the age of 28, Randolph joined with a friend in publishing a monthly magazine called the Messenger. It was billed as "the only radical Negro magazine in America." Later he contributed articles to other publications and then took a fling at politics by running unsuccessfully as the Socialist candidate in 1921 for New York secretary of state.

Randolph was active in the labor movement almost from the day he arrived in New York. He helped organize an elevator operators' union and lost his job for attempting to organize the waiters on a local railroad.

In 1925, he decided to try to organize sleeping-car porters who worked up to 400 hours a month for a wage of $67.50. It took him 12 years to win the union's first contract which cut porters' work hours in half and more than tripled their salaries.

Randolph was a warrior and conflict was what he came to expect. "You've got to fight for what you get," he once said. "I've been at many a conference table negotiating agreements, and I don't know of a single instance where anything was given without exacting it from the other side."

He carried this philosophy into the labor movement itself, agitating for equal treatment of blacks by the unions and becoming a thorn in the side of AFL-CIO president George Meany. In 1961, he was censured by the union for the accusations he made.

In 1941, Randolph organized a march on Washington to protest discrimination in defense plants. The march was called off when President Roosevelt yielded to the pressure and signed an executive order banning such discrimination.

Seven years later, Randolph and other black leaders launched another fight against discrimination in the military, which resulted in another executive order signed by President Truman.

Randolph conceived and organized the march on Washington in 1963, which drew 250,000 persons and brought pressure on Congress for civil rights legislation.

Five years later, Randolph retired as president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

Positive Leadership

Lincoln, Neb.

It is disgusting, yet amusing, to listen to the near-hysterical mouthings of the governor and certain members of the Legislature concerning Coach Devaney and the "Coach of the Year" award. I'm sure their loud wailing is small comfort to Devaney. He must have wanted that award as much as he wanted a national championship team. There is no greater satisfaction than receiving the acclaim of your peers — and he should have had that ultimate achievement.

Perhaps the reason for the loud outcries from the Capitol are pangs of conscience. Surely the powers that be must realize that nothing they have done in the past year has assisted Coach Devaney (witness the fieldhouse fiasco) — and nothing they have done has advanced the state of Nebraska one iota in any area, particularly in the eyes of the rest of the country. As long as Nebraska maintains the penny-pinching, regressive image it now holds, we cannot expect proper national acclaim — even in the field of athletics. Nebraska is judged on criteria other than her football laurels — even though Big Red fans don't like to face up to that fact. Until we are willing to excel in other areas and bring our beloved state into the 20th Century, along with the other 49, individuals such as Coach Devaney will continue to be denied the acclaim which should be theirs.

We need positive leadership from the State Capitol rather than the negativism of budget-slashing, worthwhile programs being cut or eliminated altogether, with the ensuing low morale and destructive force which these actions generate. We are continually hearing of economies in state government; yet budgets exceed by millions budgets of the previous administration. Because of the prosperity of Nebraskans, taxes collected last year were far above expectation, yet sales and income taxes were raised. There is much talk of economy, yet increased amounts continue to be spent without visible progress in any area.

The state CAN afford progressive programs. Nebraska ranks at the top in per capita income for the entire United States and at the very bottom in per capita state taxes paid.

Until we taxpayers are willing to demand proper leadership in our State Capitol — in order to advance our state to excellence in every area of state government — we will have to be content with the blurred image Nebraska now endures from the rest of the nation — and even Bob Devaney and his double national championship Cornhuskers cannot overcome that deficiency for us.

If the same amount of energy, enthusiasm and dollars expended by Big Red fans could be dispensed accordingly to promote Nebraska in all areas, Coach Devaney then couldn't be denied the acclaim from other coaches of the nation which he so rightly deserves.

DISGUSTED BIG RED FAN

Fairbury, Neb.

Now I see that we family bread-winners are going to be asked to support a public baby-sitting program for those people who insist on both members of the household being in the nation's work force. We have to support programs of rejuvenation of the child who is maladjusted because he does not receive the needed parental guidance. We have to work for lower wages because women are a source of unorganized and thus cheap labor. We have in our society a great deal of unemployment: this unemployment includes many men with families who could be earning a respectable living for their families if it were not for all the women in society working mostly for cheap wages) just to add what might be termed "frosting" to their husbands' already adequate salaries.

And now they are pressing for public baby-sitting for their neglected children. The sad part is that they are very likely to succeed. I can understand such a service for women who are the only support for their families. But something is wrong with a society which denies large segments of the available male work force a chance to pursue a reasonable survival, while favoring unneeded segments with such mercenary programs.

Conclusion: Such programs are only half thought out: such programs are devised by self-interest groups (white, upper-middle-class segment of our society); such programs are going to compound, not solve our problems; such casual behavior by a portion of our society is causing deterioration of our whole society.

MAD DAD

Profane Talk

Salem, Ore.

When I was postmaster in a small town here in Oregon, my nearest neighbor was Curt Goodrich. One Sunday he was out pruning rosebushes in his front yard. I went over to visit with him, as he was a very wise man and I knew I might learn something from him.

His old dog, Sandy, was with him. Soon another neighbor came who was noted for his profane and dirty talk. He started in. At once Curt said, "Sandy, go to the house." Sandy did not move and Curt repeated the order.

The man said, "You need not send him to the house. He's not bothering me." Curt said, "I know, but I don't want him to hear your kind of talk."

Mr. and Mrs. John Michael McGowan of Omaha make announcement this morning of the engagement of their daughter, Geraldine Patricia, to Douglas James Frost, also of Omaha, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry James Frost of Charles City, Iowa.

The wedding is planned for June.

Miss McGowan was graduated in December from the University of Nebraska where she is a member of Alpha Omicron Pi sorority of which she served as president.

Mr. Frost also is a graduate of the University of Nebraska and his fraternity is Kappa Sigma.

BETROTHALS

MISS DEBORAH HOWELL

Town and campus circles will share interest this morning in the announcement made by Dr. and Mrs. D. L. Howell of Beatrice, of the engagement of their daughter, Deborah, to C. John Guenzel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Guenzel of Lincoln.

Saturday, May 20, has been chosen as the date of the wedding.

Miss Howell is a sophomore at the University of Nebraska.

Mr. Guenzel was graduated from Kemper Military Academy at Booneville, Mo., and now is attending the University of Nebraska where he is a member of Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

MISS MARY ANN KEAN

Sorority Row on the University of Nebraska campus is busy with news of betrothals this morning.

Among them is the announcement made by Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Kean of Dawson, of the engagement of their daughter, Mary Ann, to John Chaney, son of Charles F. Chaney of Falls City.

A late summer wedding is planned.

Miss Kean is a senior at the University of Nebraska where she is a member of Alpha Phi sorority. Little Sisters of Minerva and of Alpha Lambda Delta honorary, and where she is majoring in art.

Mr. Chaney was graduated from the University of Nebraska College of Business Administration, and now is associated with the Falls City Federal Savings and Loan. His fraternity is Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

MISS CHERYL HOOPS

Announcement is made this morning by Mr. and Mrs. Wilber Hoops of Deshler, of the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Cheryl, to Richard Linder, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Linder of Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Saturday, April 22, is named as the date of the wedding.

Miss Hoops is a graduate of the Bryan Memorial Hospital School of Nursing, and now is a member of the nursing staff at Bryan Hospital.

Mr. Linder is a graduate of Peru State College, and recently completed a tour of duty with the U.S. Army.

Happy Hollow Heights Skyline Terrace Meadow Lane

suburbia

Although Lincoln residents are, at the present time, supposed to be enjoying that fabled "long winter's nap" that, allegedly, should last until warm weather is once again with us, we have a feeling that there are actually very few individuals currently in a state of hibernation. Activity in the suburban areas would indicate that things are far from "sleepy" in this particular city.

Last weekend was especially festive for one member of the Happy Hollow Heights younger generation. The young lady we have reference to is Miss Lauri Thompson who spent last Saturday, Jan. 15, celebrating her tenth birthday. Lauri, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred P. Thompson, invited three of her friends to join her for an afternoon of ice skating, followed by a cake and ice cream party at her home. Taking part in the fun were Jean Ann Larsen, Susan Nelson and Barbara Jones.

Winter traveling seems to be an ever-popular pastime, and included among those who recently have taken to the road—or perhaps we should say the airlines—were Mr. and Mrs. Garry A. Powell. On Saturday, Jan. 8, they flew from Lincoln to Williamsburg, Va., where they spent six days in attendance at a Young Life Staff Conference.

Two other Lincoln residents who also attended the conference were Mr. and Mrs. Bill Erickson.

A trip of a bit longer duration took Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Moore from their Meadow Lane home to Europe and back again during the first part of January. Mr. and Mrs. Moore returned on Wednesday from a three-week trip which took them into six European countries.

The first stop on their itinerary was Madrid, Spain, where they spent three days sightseeing in the city and the surrounding countryside. From there, they continued on to France for a four-day visit which gave the travelers sufficient time to see the major points of interest in Paris.

A brief stop in Zurich, Switzerland preceded a five-day sojourn in Italy where they took in the sights in Rome and Naples in Germany, they found Munich and Hanover much to their liking; and their last stop before returning to the United States, was in London.

Incidentally, we should also mention the fact that, on their way back to Nebraska, Mr. and Mrs. Moore did find time to stop in Hartford, Conn., where they enjoyed a short visit with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Landis Calloway and children, Angela, Scott and Brian.

One of the busiest homes in the Meadow Lane neighborhood this weekend just happens to be the one belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Sorensen. Arriving in Lincoln later today for a family reunion will be nine members of Mrs. Sorensen's family all of whom will be guests at the Sorensen home.

Among those participating in the get-together will be Mrs. Sorensen's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Damrow, and her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Damrow and children, Cal and Lisa, all of Des Moines, Iowa, and her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Everett and daughter, Cynthia, who make their home in Carroll, Iowa.

On Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Damrow will be the guests of honor at a dinner which will take place at the Sorensen home in honor of their 45th wedding anniversary.

The visitors will return to their respective homes late Sunday afternoon.

Saying good-bye to a friend, who is moving to another city is never a pleasant affair. A "going away" party does help however, to make the best of such an occurrence. Serving as hostess for just such a farewell courtesy, which will take place this evening, is Miss Karen Vogel, daughter of Skyline Terrace residents, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Vogel.

Guest of honor at the festivities, which will take place at the Vogel home, will be Miss Alice Russell who with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Russell, is moving to Dallas, Tex., in the very near future.

On hand for the fun will be a number of Miss Russell's East High School classmates.

MISS ARLENE BUSBOOM

This morning Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Busboom make announcement of the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Arlene Kay, to Gerald T. Giraud, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Giraud.

The wedding will take place on Saturday, March 18.

Mr. Giraud is a former student at the University of South Dakota and will be attending the University of Nebraska in the autumn.

The annual meeting of the Homestead Girl Scout Council, to be held at the Lincoln Center Bldg., on Sunday, Jan. 23, will be highlighted by a panel discussion on initiating social force, and the presentation of several special awards.

The Role of Girl Scouting and the Need for Change in Today's Society" will be discussed by the panel, which will include Council Board members Mrs. Walter French, Mrs. Earl Jenkins, and Dr. Milton Evans; College Girl Scout Vicki Zessin of Beatrice, and Senior Girl Scout Karen McCaw.

The Thanks Badge, the highest honor bestowed on a volunteer by the Council, will be awarded during the recognition ceremony.

Mrs. J. James Exon, honorary Council president, will present Girl Scout Friendship pins to three Lincoln American Field Service

Students who are members of the Girl Guides in their countries. The three who will be honored are Miss Asta Birkeland of Norway, Miss Gudren Heinrichson of Sweden, and Miss Jad Nakarat of Thailand.

New officers will be elected and committee reports will be made at the meeting, which is scheduled to begin at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Abby: you had right idea

DEAR ABBY: I am a school teacher. The other day another teacher told me in the presence of the school nurse and some office secretaries, that she had seen a woman shoplift a purse in a local store.

I asked her if she reported the incident to anyone, and she said she had not. I then told her that I thought she had an obligation to report it.

A discussion followed. One person agreed with me. Another said, "If that woman was stealing, she must have been very hard up and needed to steal so it would have been unkind to report her."

Another said, "I'd have minded my own business because if I made such an accusation and wasn't able to prove it, I could be sued for slander."

Now I'd like your opinion, Abby.

AN EX ANGELENO

DEAR EX: I would have reported it. To quote Edmund Burke (again), "All that is necessary for evil to triumph is for good men to do nothing."

DEAR ABBY: We have a very surly, selfish son in law who is married to our only child.

She is a wonderful girl and we love her very much, but we just can't understand him. He treats our daughter all right as far as we can see, but he treats us terribly.

When we invite the two of them for supper, she usually comes alone. She's embarrassed, but confesses she couldn't get him to come with her. When he does come, he eats fast and wants to run away right after the meal is over.

We have given them a lot of financial help. We bought them a nice little house and are helping them furnish it. We even bought them a second car.

I was in the hospital for two weeks and he never came to see me once. He didn't even send me a card!

Would it be childish for us to treat him like he treats us? I mean stop all financial help? I wouldn't want to hurt my daughter, but someone should teach this fellow a lesson.

HURT
Dear HURT: Any financial help you give him was undoubtedly more for your daughter's sake than his. Don't reward his indifference and rudeness with generosity, but be careful how you "teach him a lesson" or your daughter might wind up paying for the lesson.

Partner bids Three Hearts. Since opener states he has less than an opening bid, and this hand is also somewhat less than an opening bid — and it ardinarly takes two opening bids to make game — the best bet is to pass and hope that partner can make nine tricks.

2. Four hearts. Here there is bound to be a reasonable chance for game. Our opening bid plus, faced by partner's opening bid minus, will probably produce ten tricks. There should be no compunctions about raising with only two trumps, for partner probably has a seven-card suit.

3. Four hearts. This may seem strange in view of the previous comments, but the raise is simply a strategic maneuver. There is not much chance of the bluff succeeding, since the enemy can surely make a huge number of tricks in either spades or clubs, but very little harm can come from putting on a bold front. You might even get lucky and come home scotfree.

4. Six hearts. No guarantees go with this bid either, but prospects of making a slam are nevertheless very good. About all that partner needs for a shot at twelve tricks is something like seven hearts to the K-G-J and a side king.

5. Pass. You can't fight City Hall. Making a game is out of the question, and three spades (forcing) would almost surely make matters worse. It must be borne in mind that partner has announced a poor hand suitable only for hearts, so why look for trouble?

Here's the population explosion in personal terms. To the proud parents, it's their first child—and they love her! But to the statisticians, who deal only with cold facts, she's just one more person on an already crowded earth.

What a dilemma! We want children, but we want them to face a secure future. When almost no one is optimistic about the present, how can anyone look forward to the future?

Other generations have faced momentous problems, too. Yet, with God's help, they surmounted them.

And God—if we turn to His Church—will do the same for us!

THE NUMBER'S GAME

Chambers Says UNO Plans To Fire Black Studies Head

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha Friday protested what he said is a University of Nebraska at Omaha (UNO) administrative decision not to renew the contract of Dr. Milton White, director of the Black Studies Department.

In brief remarks to the Legislature, Chambers said he would like to meet with interested senators to "present to you the case for the Black Studies Department and its significance to us."

Chambers also wrote NU President D. B. Varner asking him to "head this explosive collision off."

Vows 'Cripple' Attempt

Chambers told Varner he is "prepared to do everything in my power to cripple the university if the university continues being a source of such agony and distress for the black community."

A decision not to renew White's contract "reawakens all the bitterness in this community which were generated when the Omaha Public Schools spat in the face of the black community by unjustifiably firing my brother, Eddie Chambers, from his counselor position at Tech Junior High," Chambers wrote.

"In both cases, the men were deeply rooted in the black community; each of them provided a positive image to the youth and a positive influence toward the solution of our identity crisis."

Wary of Confrontation

Chambers told Varner he is "weary of continually being confronted with a situation wherein a strong black man is threatened by insecure whites who object to us standing and demanding rather than kneeling and begging."

"Dr. White is not a beggar, nor am I."

At issue is "the very essence of the value of the university to the black community and whether white men will arbitrarily determine that no black man can hold a position with the university unless he conforms to the old notion of a plantation hand," Chambers wrote.

'Must Draw A Line'

"Black men must draw a line beyond which we will not be pushed. I have reached that line."

In his remarks to the Legislature, Chambers said the UNO administration apparently "decided Dr. White is too controversial."

But White is "soft-spoken, logical, willing to discuss all matters at length and hear all sides," he said.

"If he is too controversial, then the university and all it stands for can go straight to hell."

Chambers said black children are "still suffering mental death at the hands of the University of Nebraska."

They are "used" as football players, but on other matters they are "included out," along with Chicanos and native Americans, he declared.

Chambers presented his remarks in praising Coach Bob Devaney's request to the Legislature to forego its planned public meeting to honor the coach, his staff and the NU football team.

"I give him 100% on the action he's taken," Chambers said. It showed "good judgment."

Devaney, he said, seems to have "given permission to the state to grow up once again... and not act like little children living over a football game time and time again."

Military Cut Is Called For By Peterson

Democratic senatorial candidate Wallace Peterson Friday said military outlays over the next four years should be "pared back to the pre-Vietnam levels (of) about $50 billion per year."

That can be accomplished

"without impairment to our essential nuclear deterrent," he said in the text of a speech before a student audience at North Platte Junior College released to newsmen in Lincoln.

"The civilian leadership must insist that our military leadership stop preparing to fight World War II all over again at a time when the cost of obsolete weapons has escalated many times over."

(The current Department of Defense budget is about $80 billion)

"As we finally extricate ourselves from the morass in Vietnam, we must at the same time end the military domination of our national life," Peterson said.

The emphasis on military expenditures has resulted in "an excessive 'brain drain' which has starved the civilian economy of badly needed scientific and technical talent," he said.

Another consequence has been "drastic neglect of needed social investments in our great cities in mass transportation, and in education, not to mention the preservation and repair of our mangled environment," he declared.

"And finally there is the slow and insidious damage our values and institutions sustain by inflation" fed by military spending and war

Frontier Airlines Announces New Flight Schedules

Cheyenne, Wyo. (AP) — Frontier Airlines has announced new commuter flight schedules between six communities in western Nebraska, Wyoming and Colorado, effective immediately.

A Frontier official said the new Beech 99 schedules will improve flight connections at Denver and expand commuter service at Chadron, Alliance, Sidney and Scottsbluff, Neb., and at Cheyenne and Denver.

The 15-passenger aircraft will arrive in Cheyenne from Scottsbluff early every morning and then depart for Denver. The return flight will arrive in Cheyenne from Denver in the early evening and then depart for Sidney.

Services Slated In Hastings For Mabel Gettmann

Hastings (AP) — Funeral services will be held in Hastings Monday for Mrs. Mabel Gettmann, 86, mother of Hastings Mayor William F. Gettmann.

The service will be at 2 p.m. in the New York Avenue Congregational Church in Hastings with the Rev. David Gustafson officiating.

Mrs. Gettmann died Thursday in a Beatrice hospital.

Peterson said the U.S. should also end the military draft.

"I find it bitterly ironic that Senator Curtis now says he is opposed to the draft, yet both last September and last June when he had a chance to make his views felt in a way that really counted, he voted to continue this system," Peterson said.

NU Officials Deny Charge

University of Nebraska officials denied Friday that the chairman of the UN-O's black studies department will be fired, and Chairman Milton White agrees that they are "technically correct."

"But there is a movement afoot in officialdom to somehow cancel my presence" at the Omaha school, White said.

University of Nebraska at Omaha Chancellor Dr. J. V. Blackwell said the report was not true "and I think Milton White will deny it, too."

White said that "nothing formal" has happened but that some university officials "are constantly reminding me that my contract is going to be reviewed."

not one of the officials threatening him and that the denial was "technically correct."

"But I know that there are some who are disheartened by my tactics, who think I might be indoctrinating young people," he added. He said he was grateful for Chambers' remarks.

"I think he was translating some of these things into real terms," White said. "It was an expression of justice and a will to see another person treated fairly."

White is in his second semester at the Omaha school. He came to the university from the University of California at Santa Barbara.

of elective members be from Class I districts, or five members.

Skillstad and Michaels received the lowest vote totals of the seven Class I representatives chosen.

In other decisions Friday, the court:

—Affirmed the Lancaster County District Court conviction of Les Clinton on a drunk driving charge and upheld the sentence given Clinton.

—Dismissed an appeal from Richardson County District Court and directed the lower court to dismiss the complaint against the defendant, Melvin Campbell, who died late last year.

—Reversed a Douglas County District Court ruling in favor of the city of Omaha in a suit brought by George R. Sedberry & Grading Company, Inc. The high court ordered a new trial. Rose charged the city had dumped sewage onto his property and asked damages.

—Affirmed the Scotts Bluff County District Court decision in a divorce action between Sidney and Rachel Kremen, ruling that Kremen may withhold $1,500 in alimony until his ex-wife returns some personal property to him.

—Upheld the Madison County District Court conviction of Edwin Offenberg on a charge of concealing a motor vehicle with knowledge it had been stolen.

—Affirmed the Adams County District Court conviction of Herman Hoffmeyer on a charge of fondling a minor.

—Agreed with the Lancaster County District Court in turning down a habeas corpus writ request from Penal Complex inmate Vernon R. Middlebrook.

—Upheld the Douglas County District Court conviction of Eugene Morgan, Jr., on a charge of breaking and entering a dwelling.

—Refused to set aside the three to 10-year prison term meted out by the Douglas County District Court to Decatur Williams after a robbery conviction.

—Upheld the Saunders County District Court in pair of Workmen's Compensation Court-related cases. Panhandle Construction Co. was found to be liable for Workmen's Compensation for Charles Warren, Jr., while Mid-America Pipeline Co. was held not liable for Workmen's Compensation for Warren. The cases stemmed from a 1968 gas explosion near Yutan in which Warren and another man were killed.

BE IT RESOLVED by the Board of County Commissioners of Lancaster County, Nebraska, in regular session assembled this 18 day of January, 1972, in the County-City Building, in Lincoln, Lancaster County, Nebraska, as follows:

WHEREAS, by Resolution No. 2702, the County Engineer and Highway Commissioner of Lancaster County, Nebraska, was directed to study the use being made of a certain public county road described as follows:

All of Drury Lane not vacated by Resolution No. 1971, the same lying between the West line of Point Drive and the East line of Strain's Acres as platted in the Southwest 1/4 of Section 34, Township 10 North, Range 7 East of the 6th p.m., Lancaster County, Nebraska, WHEREAS, said County Engineer and Highway Commissioner has made a study and written report to the Board of County Commissioners and has recommended that the present public county road described above be vacated and abandoned.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that a public hearing be held upon said proposed vacation and abandonment of the public county road above described and that this resolution be published once a week for three consecutive weeks in a legal newspaper of the county and that said public hearing be held in the office of the County Commissioners in the County-City Building, Lincoln, Nebraska, at 10:00 a.m., on the 8 day of February, 1972.

DATED this 18 day of January, 1972.

Chinese Nationalists Said Stoic

By SAM THORSON
Star Staff Writer

Wahoo —The Nationalist Chinese People are "very stoic, calm and composed" about their country's expulsion from the United Nations, a top Taiwan diplomat said here Friday night.

Minister S. K. Hu, special assistant to the Taiwan ambassador to the United States, was a featured speaker at a banquet given at John F. Kennedy College in honor of Hu and the Ya Tung Nationalist Chinese Women's Basketball Team.

The basketball team played a J.F.K. women's team Thursday night, losing 64-43.

Hu, currently the No. 2 man in Taiwan's Washington embassy, has been a general in the Chinese air force, Taiwan minister of defense, chief of military information, head of Taiwan's mission in the U.S., and interpreter for Chiang Kai-Shek, at various stages in his military and diplomatic career.

"Too Much To Do"

The Nationalist Chinese have "too many things to do that are not to be thrown away casually" to "cry in the streets" over the loss of their UN seat, Hu said.

Taiwan's essential relationship with the U.S. will not be changed by specific administrative policies, Hu said, adding that "it is the American people who will really chose the course of action."

Nationalist China will remain allied with the U.S. as a vital link in the "western Pacific defense perimeter," Hu said, and domestically will continue to safeguard "the traditional Chinese civilization and way of life."

The Communists, he said, "have openly declared the eradication of the old civilization."

"Should Learn"

Looking to the future of the U.S.-Red China relationship, Hu suggested that Red Chinese Prime Minister Chou En-Lai should learn from the experiences of his two predecessors as Mao Tse-tung's second-hand man. Chao is anxious to be successful with President Nixon when he visits China, Hu said, but the Red Chinese foreign minister should recall that both Lin Shao-Chi and Lin Piao were "probably" purged by Mao for becoming too influential.

In a flurry of tongue-in-check protocol, Hu was presented with an admiralship in the Nebraska Navy, an honorary Nebraska citizenship, and a piece of polished Nebraska blue agate by Lt. Gov. Frank Marsh, and a one-day honorary mayorship of Wahoo by Mayor Jack Swanson.

In his first and only official action as honorary mayor, the visiting diplomat declared all parking tickets null and void.
